SENATE OVERRIDES PAY VETO, 63-27

New Air Bids Force Barred Mail Lines Reformation

3-Month Contracts to Be Awarded for 15 Routes.

Revised Bill Puts Limit on Subsidies

Spoils Conference Made Basis of "Blacklist" on Line Officers.

By Fraklyn Waltman, Jr.

Announcing plans for the awarding of temporary air mail contracts, Postmaster General James A. Farley yesterday prescribed that no company may be an eligible bidder whose air mail contract was canceled last month unless it reorganized its corporate set-up and eliminated from its officers and directors any person who attended the May, 1930, air-mail conference.

Mr. Farley said he would be ready within two or three days to advertise for bids to carry air mail over 15 routes. Bids must be submitted within 15 days and operations must start within 30 days after contracts are awarded. The contracts will be awarded for a three-month period, with the right of extension for one or two three-month periods.

Meanwhile the Senate Postoffice and Post Roads Committee favorably reported the revised McKellar-Black air-mail bill with an important amendment which if enacted would have the effect of stopping all subsidies in connection with the transportation of air mail after four years.

Bans Old Personnel.

This bill also would bar from bidding for or holding air-mail contracts any company having an officer "or another" who previously had entered into any combination or conspiracy to prevent the making of a bid for an air-mail contract or sought in any way to induce another not to bid for such a contract.

The Farley regulation, however, goes far beyond this restriction, in that the Postmaster General is forcing virtually every large air line in the country to undergo reorganization or forego a mail contract. It has been contended that few of these lines can exist without a mail contract.

Nothing is said in the regula-

Spain Wracked By New Strike

Syndicalist Socialist Forces Walk Out; Troops on Guard.

Zaragoza, Spain, March 28 (AP).—All Spain was in a state of foment tonight as Syndicalists and Socialists joined in a revolutionary strike here, but the military forces controlled the situation.

The movement was announced as a protest against the alleged treatment of prisoners held for bombings Monday which killed four persons.

Zaragoza has been a stronghold of the Syndicalists for months and was the scene of a revolt in December in which more than 100 were killed.

In other parts of the country there were indications of trouble as minor disturbances occurred.

A few hours before the movement began here the cabinet in Madrid decided to push a bill through Parliament reestablishing the death penalty for armed assault and robbery, bombings and sabotage against public works.

Troops were sent out into the streets as soon as the strike was declared. Orders were issued for military patrols under provisions of a state of alarm, which is similar to martial law. Street cars and taxicabs were withdrawn from the streets to prevent damage to them.

Norris to Replace Denny in Virginia

Richmond, March 28 (AP).—An authoritative source said tonight that Senator Robert O. Norris, jr., of Lancaster, will be appointed Assistant Attorney General, succeeding Collins Denny, jr., resigned.

The appointment will be made public tomorrow or the next day, it was said. Attorney General Staples has made no announcement of who will replace Denny, other than to say that the place would be filled about April 1.

Farmer Labor Urges Cooperative Union

St. Paul, Minn., March 28 (AP).—The Farmer-Labor party's State convention today adopted a platform asserting the failure of capitalism and calling for a "complete reorganization of our social structure into a cooperative commonwealth."

Government ownership and operation of all natural resources, the machinery of production, transportation and communication facilities was set forth as the foundation of the party's proposed new order.

Insull Sails Past Istanbul For Rumania

"One Passenger" Aboard, Ship Says; Bucharest Hints Welcome.

(Copyright, 1934, by Associated Press.)

Istanbul, March 28.—Samuel Insull's floating hideaway, the Greek freighter Maiotis, steamed through the Sea of Marmora tonight toward Istanbul, the Black Sea and Rumania.

The captain of the sea-battered ship, which for more than a week has sailed Aegean and Mediterranean waters, signaled that he had one passenger aboard, believed to be the 74-year-old fugitive from American fraud charges.

Whether this was the former Chicago financier was not definitely determined as the dingy tramp, which Insull chartered two weeks ago in Greece, proceeded toward the storm-tossed Black Sea.

It was generally agreed, however, that the substitution of any one else for Insull would be hard to imagine unless in pursuance of an elaborate deception scheme of which there was no evidence.

A change was apparent today in Rumanian officialdom, a dispatch from Bucharest stated. It was said that Rumania "has no extradition

Commissions for All Annapolis Grads Voted to Build Up Navy

The House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday unanimously voted to commission all graduates of the United States Naval Academy, to build up the officer strength of the Navy in preparation for the construction program authorized in the Vinson "treaty Navy" act.

The committee ordered a favorable report on a bill amending the present law, which permits only about half of the Annapolis graduating class to enter the official lists of the Navy.

The bill would be retroactive to May, 1933, when only half of the graduates received commissions. Although the measure has been submitted to the Budget Bureau, it has yet to receive Administration approval.

The present requirement that no less than one-half of the graduating midshipmen be commissioned was enacted last spring when a large senior class was faced with graduation without commissions because the Navy quota was filled.

At hearings preceding yesterday's committee vote, Navy officers testified only 5,898 officers will be available next year, 100 short of the number necessary to man vessels already commissioned, if the bill does not pass. If the "treaty Navy" construction program is carried out, 6,700 officers will be needed, officials said, contending the pending bill would still leave the Navy short some 200 officers.

It was estimated 150 uncommissioned "leftovers" from last year's Annapolis class will receive commissions under the bill. It was said only about 380 of the present class of 469 will be graduated this June and be eligible for commissions under the measure.

"Red" Called Roosevelt 'A Kerensky'

House Committee Today Will Seek Limited Wirt Inquiry.

McGugin Asserts Probe Will Terminate in "Whitewash."

By Robert C. Albright.

Confronted with statements that President Roosevelt, before taking office, heard himself compared with Russia's Kerensky, the House Rules Committee today plans to call for a limited inquiry into "brain trust" conspiracy charges of Dr. William A. Wirt.

A new resolution was introduced yesterday by Representative Bulwinkle (Democrat), North Carolina, confining the investigation rigidly to Dr. Wirt's allegations and alleged "brain trust" conspirators named by him.

Representative McGugin (Republican), Kansas, immediately called it a "whitewash resolution," and asked for a broader inquiry. It was McGugin who first received word in Washington of the reputed origin of the "Kerensky" analogy.

Letter Made Public.

The Kansan made public the following letter from Walter M. Higgins, of the Associated Groups for Economic Liberty:

"I think I can clear up the origin of the Kerensky story for you. I can testify that I heard George W. Christians, the leader of the American Reds, tell President Roosevelt himself in the presence of Dr. Raymond Moley and Col. Marvin McIntyre, on December 1, 1932, at Warm Springs, Ga., before the inauguration, that he, President Roosevelt, would only be the Kerensky of this revolution."

Verified in New York by Prof. Moley, and in Chattanooga, Tenn., by Christians, it was denied in Associated Press dispatches from Gary that Dr. Wirt heard the statement. The Indiana educator insisted he heard a "brain truster" say Roosevelt was "only a Kerensky" to be displaced "by a Stalin."

Christians, an advocate of monetary reforms, was identified as president of "The Crusaders for Economic Liberty," and Higgins as one of his associates.

Reached in Chattanooga yesterday by United Press, Christians confirmed reports of the incident and was quoted as saying he further told the President:

"If you move to the third stage of the revolution, to the 'Lenin' dictatorship stage, you'll be the first man in history to do so."

Wirt Didn't Hear Statement.

To this, he said the President replied:

"Well, Oliver Cromwell did it."

Grapefruit Yields Perfume; a Scent For Every Squirt

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 28 (AP). Turning grapefruit skins into rare [illegible] chemical move of the American citrus in-

Nothing like grapefruit will these new odors be. They will be violets, roses, hyacinths and, possibly, even orange blossoms.

The process was explained to the American Chemical Society today by E. K. Nelson, of the United States Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, of Washington. He did not call it perfume, but "Florida grapefruit oil."

Dr. Nelson said grapefruit canners use 100,000 tons of grapefruit annually, and estimated the peels from this business would produce 50,000 pounds of oil a year.

700 Norfolk Sailors In Measles Quarantine

Norfolk, Va., March 28 (Spl.).—Seven hundred men at the Norfolk naval operating base are in quarantine because of a measules epidemic. The number of cases has reached 90, with about 60 discharged.

Naval authorities said the precautions were taken because of the almost daily arrival of recruits. None of the cases has been of a serious nature. There are about 1,800 men at the naval base, but authorities feel the epidemic can be held within the barracks occupied by new arrivals.

Two Killed, 10 Hurt As Boulder Hits Train

Paris, March 28 (U.P.).—A woman and a child were killed in a train wreck near the village of Bleale today, caused by a landslide. They died when struck by a bowlder which crashed into the carriage in which they were riding as the train passed through a gorge.

Ten others were taken to a hospital for treatment.

No Communism In 'New Deal,' Says President

New Book Asserts That "Peaceful Revolution" Only Apt Term.

New York, March 28 (AP).—In the foreword of his forthcoming new book, "On Our Way," President Roosevelt says if his Administration "is a revolution, it is a peaceful one, achieved without violence, without the overthrow of the purposes of established law and without the denial of just treatment to any individual or class."

The proofs of the foreword, given out tonight by the publishers, the John Day Co., read:

"Some people have called our new policy 'Fascism.' It is not Fascism because its inspiration springs from the mass of the people themselves rather than from a class or a group or a marching army. Moreover, it is being achieved without a change in fundamental republican method. We have kept faith with, and in, our traditional political institutions.

"Some people have called it 'Communism;' it is not that either. It is not a driving regimentation founded upon the plans of a perpetuating directorate which subordinates the making of laws and the processes of the courts to the orders of the executive. Neither does it manifest itself in the total elimination of any class or in the abolition of private property.

"If it is a revolution, it is a peaceful one, achieved without violence, without the overthrow of the purposes of established law and without the denial of just treatment to any individual or class."

200,000 More Steel Workers Expect Raise

10% Wage Increase Would Boost Month's Pay Roll by $3,000,000.

(Associated Press.)

With at least 125,000 steel workers already promised a 10 per cent increase in their pay envelopes, effective April 1, more than 200,000 others today are expecting an announcement that the wage boost will be extended throughout this giant industry.

Steel men roughly estimate a general increase would amount to well over $3,000,000 a month, and that probably more than $1,200,000 a month is involved in the boost thus far announced.

Nearly a score of steel companies have joined in the movement within the last 48 hours, each adding to the evidence tending to confirm reports that the entire industry already has decided on the raise.

Two subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation and the second largest producer in industry—the Bethlehem Steel Co.—are among the latest to announce the increase. It was indicated that although U. S. Steel itself was noncommittal, the parent corporation had approved the boost for the subsidiaries.

Court Quenches West Virginian's 30-Quart Thirst

Charleston, W. Va., March 28 (Spl.).—Although State authorities have followed a ruling by Attorney General Homer A. Holt that possession of liquor legally purchased in other States for personal use is legal in West Virginia, Muuicipal Judge Boone Dawson today fined Herb Hannigan, of Charleston, $104 for having 30 quarts of liquor.

While Judge Dawson said he agreed with the ruling, he added that "anyone who has as much as 30 quarts is going to be held guilty unless he can show that the liquor was brought in by him for personal use at a banquet in his home, for the entertainment of his own friends or for some similar purpose."

Unseen Machine Guns Sold to Junk Dealer

Los Angeles, March 28 (AP).—Samuel Goldman, a Venice second-hand dealer, buys unclaimed goods from warehouses, "sight unseen." He sees the boxes, but doesn't know what they contain. Each of five boxes he bought yesterday contained a machine gun. Each gun had been fired and contained empty shells.

Police reported the guns were purchased originally in Willamette, Ill., July 1, 1927.

NRA Revamp Job Is Given To Harriman

Son of Rail Magnate to Have Charge of Enforcing Codes.

Johnson's Office 'Cracks Down' on News of Developments.

W. Averell Harriman, son of the late E. H. Harriman, railroad magnate, has been given the job of reorganizing the NRA in order to secure greater enforcement of the 400 codes now drawn, it was learned yesterday.

Harriman, who has been a deputy administrator, now becomes special assistant to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson. NRA officials refused to discuss the new developments yesterday, in conformity with what appeared to observers to be a recently adopted policy of "cracking down" on the news.

The Day's Developments.

The following developments gave support to this belief:

I: was the thirty-first day to pass without a general press conference which Johnson has been previously accustomed to hold twice weekly. Gen. Johnson likewise failed to reveal when, or if, he will go to the Capitol to testify on the Wagner bill, which has been seriously amended in its anti-company union provisions since the President's decision in the automobile case.

The NRA press division refused all information on the reorganization which was known to have taken place several days ago. William Lawson, who has been in charge of the Administration's publicity since the departure of Charles Michelson, would neither confirm or deny details of the change. It was understood that Lawson was acting on orders from the administrator.

The compliance division opened offices in a made-over apartment building at 1523 L street, which is at least a mile from NRA headquarters in the Department of Commerce. The compliance director, William H. Davis, was recently at odds with Gen. Johnson in the handling of the Budd case, a labor dispute in Philadelphia. In the administration of his division, Davis has endeavored to make himself available to the press.

Johnson's failure to go to Capitol Hill was explained on the ground that the administrator was "too busy." It was recalled he had been scheduled to testify in support of the Wagner bill last Monday. At that time it was so drawn as virtually to prohibit all company unions.

Bill Now Redrafted.

In the President's decision averting the automobile strike it was specifically stated, however, that the Government does not favor one type of union over another. Since that time Senator Wagner has redrawn the measure in favor of company unions, with the result that repre-

Senate Today Digs Into New Tax Measure

Passage Is Predicted for Bill to Close Law's Loopholes.

(Associated Press.)

The Senate will go to work on the Administration bill to plaster up chinks in the tax wall through which some individuals have been whispering defiance at the internal revenue collector.

In debating and voting on the measure, the chamber will be enabled for the first time to apply to legislation the lessons it learned in the long and sometimes startling investigation of the ways of private bankers.

Administration leaders predict and minority chieftains concede passage within a few days. Some amendments will be offered, but none expects the measure will be materially changed.

The banking committee's inquiry made headlines for weeks, producing among other things the information that neither J. P. Morgan nor any of his partners paid any income tax for 1932.

Provides New Revenue.

The bill seeks to abolish such practices by making them legally impossible. In addition, it provides other revenues for the Government, and the finance committee yesterday estimated its total yield at $330,000,000.

Of this, $72,000,000 was added to the measure by the committee by attaching to the bill, as passed by the House, levies on capital stock and excess profits taxes patterned after those contained in the recovery act, which would expire July 1, 1935.

At the same time, it modified to some extent House provisions for eliminating tax avoidances explaining in its formal report, submitted yesterday, that while in "complete agreement" with their purpose, it felt the provisions would "have an unfavorable effect upon business and would prevent only an inconsequential amount of tax avoidance."

The Morgan partners, the inquiry revealed, escaped tax payment because of allowed partnership deductions for shrinkage of capital. The

President Puts Cares Aside As Yacht Steams Out to Sea

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Miami, Fla., March 28.—The big yacht Nourmahal was at sea tonight somewhere off the Florida coast, carrying President Roosevelt and party of shipmates to the fishing grounds about the Bahamas.

As it nosed leisurely along the eastern seaboard, the President cut all but one tie to the mainland—the wireless—and relaxed with the apparent satisfaction all was well with the recovery campaign.

Chilly weather that dodged his trail all the way to Jacksonville greeted him on the first day out, but the trim yacht, immaculate in white and orange, churned steadily southward.

Gifted as few others in high office have been in casting worries aside and thus resuscitating himself from the strenuous strain the White House imposes, the President appeared carefree, even exuberant, as the Nourmahal plowed seaward.

Seldom does a President leave Washington with Congress in session; even rarer has one left the mainland for even the brief trip Mr. Roosevelt plans. That he was not only willing, but anxious, was eloquent testimony he held little fear of Congress.

He still withheld comment on the rambunctious Congress which overrode his veto on the independence offices bill.

Arriving in Jacksonville this morning after an overnight trip from the Capital, the President met his son James and with him rode in an open car through smiling lanes of Floridians the four miles to the dock. Donning an overcoat against the chill, he waved and

5-and-5 Plan Is Made Law By Congress Revolution

29 Democrats Aid Defeat of Roosevelt

Wild Demonstration in Chamber Follows Action.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

A Senate in revolt yesterday overrode a Presidential veto and by a vote of 63 to 27, put on the statute books the independent offices appropriation bill carrying partial restoration of Government salaries and increased benefits for veterans.

The Senate completed the job which the House had begun the day before when that body voted 310 to 72 to pass the measure despite Presidential disapproval.

The "end of the honeymoon" which had been forecast by other developments in recent weeks came with a definiteness which found 29 Democrats deserting their leader and joining with 33 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite to override his veto. All of the 27 who voted to sustain the veto were Democrats.

Announcement by Vice President Garner of the result of the roll call was greeted with an outburst of cheering from Senators, members of the House, who crowded the floor, and the crowded galleries.

Defeat for Roosevelt.

One middle-aged man shouted, "Atta boy, Mac," to Senator Patrick A. McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, who had led the fight for restoration of Government salaries. He continued to shout and wave his hat while his wife tugged at his sleeve in an effort to persuade him to desist.

Vice President Garner made no effort to quell the outburst. After a minute or two he simply left the chair and went down on the floor to talk with Senator Joseph T. Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, majority leader, without going through the formality of bringing the ses-

Mystery Veils Couple's Death

Broker and Woman Found Shot to Death After Drinking Party.

New York, March 28 (AP).—Margaret Biederbick, 35, a teacher in a Brooklyn public school, and Thomas G. R. Pierson, 58, head of a Manhattan insurance brokerage firm, were found dead in Pierson's apartment today. Each had been shot through the heart with an old-fashioned .45-caliber revolver.

"I do not want to make any snap judgment whether this was murder or suicide," said Dr. Charles G. Norris, chief medical examiner, pending autopsies.

Pierson shared the apartment with Frank Hanlon, formerly a lieutenant in the Marine Corps, and his business associate. Hanlon reported discovery of the bodies.

Last night, Hanlon told police, Miss Biederbick had visited them and they had drunk together until late.

When they retired, Hanlon said, it was agreed that Pierson should sleep with Hanlon in the bedroom and Miss Biederbick would pass the night on a davenport in the living room.

Hanlon said he slept until 11 a. m. and that when he awakened he found the two bodies on the davenport. The gun was on the floor near the woman's arm.

Hanlon said he heard no shot.

Sinclair, 27 Others Free in Tulsa Case

Judge Dismisses 10 Counts of Embezzlement.

Tulsa, Okla., March 28 (AP).—Harry F. Sinclair, oil magnate, and 27 other former directors of the Exchange Trust Co., of Tulsa, were cleared of all embezzlement charges against them here today.

Judge Bradford Williams dismissed the ten remaining counts after more than two weeks' preliminary hearing. Seven other counts were dismissed last Friday.

The directors had been accused of juggling accounts illegally, but the State disclaimed any attempt to prove that the $200,000 involved had been appropriated for their own use.

"Red" Termed Roosevelt the U. S. Kerensky

House Committee Today Will Seek Limited Wirt Inquiry.

Dr. Wirt was not present at the interview, but is reputed to have been in Warm Springs at the time.

Decision to redraft the Bulwinkle resolution was reached by Democratic leaders following a rules committee hearing yesterday at which the Wirt letter was denounced as Wall street "propaganda."

Both Speaker Henry T. Rainey and Representative O'Connor (Democrat), New York, acting chairman of the committee, predicted a favorable report today on the revised resolution, and House action tomorrow.

"I take no stock in this talk of revolution, but if there are men in the Government, as Dr. Wirt charges, who are trying to prolong suffering and destitution in the United States, I think it should be investigated by Congress," Representative Bulwinkle told the committee.

"If this investigation is not made and Dr. Wirt is not called to testify about his charges, the Wirt letter will be used by Republicans on the stump this fall and it will be charged that President Roosevelt has men in his Administration who are attempting to betray the Government."

Calls Rand Propagandist.

Interrupting Bulwinkle, Representative Sabath (Democrat), Illinois, observed:

"I think this man Rand (James H. Rand, jr., chairman of the Committee for the Nation, who made public the Wirt letter), is one of the heads of a great propaganda organization. They are fighting the stock exchange control bill and the Wagner labor bill, and they will stop at nothing."

Representative O'Connor referred to stories circulating in Washington that Dr. Wirt's information grew out of "the conversation at a dinner party at which the flowing bowl was extensively patronized."

"It hardly seems worthwhile to investigate gossip of that kind," said O'Connor.

"Well," said Representative Driver (Democrat), Arkansas, "that sort of people are not a great asset to the Administration."

It was at this hearing that party lines first were drawn over whether the Wirt inquiry should be broad or limited.

"If we call Dr. Wirt, I think we should broaden the scope and look into all of the rumors which are floating about Washington," said Representative Mapes (Republican), Michigan.

McGugin last night, in making public the Higgins letter, said he neither knew the man nor his organization, and took no responsibility for the correctness of his statements.

Would Quiz Four Involved.

"But in the light of the Wirt statement, and press reports quoting Mr. Moley and Mr. Christians, there should be a full House inquiry into the whole matter," he said.

"There should be no effort to smother the case.

"Wirt, Moley, Christians and Marvin McIntyre, secretary to the President, should, under oath, be called upon to give the true facts surrounding these charges."

Several times during House debate on the tariff bill yesterday, floor references were made to the Wirt incident.

Representative Fish (Republican), New York, charged President Roosevelt has established "a kitchen cabinet of professors, radicals and near Socialists," many of whom, he said, are "admirers of the system of government in Soviet Russia."

Representative Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, charged members of the "brain trust" have "as little use for Stalin as they have for the United States," and are "ready to go back to the Middle Ages, providing they are the feudal barons."

Representative Hollister (Republican), Ohio, said the Government is embarked "on a course of governmental regimentation which, if followed to its logical conclusion, will bring about a change in our form of government almost as great as that accomplished by those famous followers of Karl Marx."

From the Senate side of the Capitol, Senator Schall issued another statement in which he said "we are approaching the end of the Roosevelt dynasty," and "must counter with a new nationalism that shall only interest itself in the United States."

Representative Foulkes, (Democrat), Michigan, who Tuesday charged Wirt's allegations "are a part of a vicious Nazi plot", last night sent Dr. Wirt a telegram in which he said he accepted the Indiana educator's "challenge" to meet him "and talk it out."

Modified Resolution.

The modified Bulwinkle resolution introduced yesterday, setting up a committee of five to investigate the Wirt charges, read in part:

"The committee is authorized and directed to summon Dr. William A. Wirt, of Gary, Ind., before it, and to require him to reveal the source of statements he has made to the effect that the United States is in the process "of a deliberately planned revolution," and to the effect that certain officials, or employes of the Government, are attempting to thwart the program of National Recovery of the United States; and the committee is authorized and directed to bring before it all officials, or other persons, alleged by Dr. Wirt to have given him said information, or to be connected in any way with said activities, and to examine them as to the truth or falsity of the statements made by Dr. Wirt; and to summon and examine such other witnesses and make such further investigation in connection with such statements and the reasons and persons actuating the same as the committee in its discretion may deem advisable."

Farley Discusses Private Carrying of Mail

New Air Mail Bids to Force Barred Lines to Reorganize

tions covering bidding for the temporary contracts about the old companies reorganizing. It is pointed out, however, that under existing law no bid can be considered from "any company which previously had a contract for the carriage of air mail and whose contract was annulled under Revised Statutes, section 3950, as all such concerns are disqualified by law to contract for carrying the mail for five years after the annulment of the contract."

Consequently, Mr. Farley pointed out, the only way companies whose contracts were canceled may now bid will be for them to reorganize. He did not specify the extent such organization should go, explaining that was a matter which would be passed on by the Commerce Department and the solicitor of the Postoffice Department.

Effectiveness Questioned.

It is a question whether the airline companies can effect the required reorganization within the next two or three weeks when the new contracts will be awarded. Thomas Doe, president of Eastern Air Transport, Inc., pointed out that this was a matter for the company's stockholders to decide.

Croil Hunter, general manager of the Northwest Airways, was quoted by the Associated Press as saying that the directors of his company would seek details as to the nature and extent of the required reorganization before they could reach a decision.

The requirement that the airlines purge themselves of officers and directors accused by the Government of seeking to prevent the making of bids for mail contracts may open the way for a hearing on the charge. It was indicated at the Postoffice Department that all those who attended the May, 1930, meeting would come under the ban.

Budget Delay May Win D. C. $4,000,000

House Committee Holds Measure, Paves Way for Additions.

The House District Appropriations sub-committee yesterday practically completed marking up the 1935 District bill, but decided to hold it open to include any supplemental estimates that may be forwarded by the Budget Bureau.

A conference between Chairman Cannon of the sub-committee and Budget Director Lewis Douglas is scheduled for this wee with regard to the $4,000,000 supplemental items, and there will be time to attach any part of them to the District bill if they are approved this week. The bill will not be reported to the House before next week.

Members of the subcommittee believe that the only supplemental item which may be approved by the Budget Bureau is the additional estimate for emergency relief. They question, however, whether the $2,700,000 asked by the District Commissioners will be accepted or reduced.

Were it not for the threat of Commissioner George E. Allen that unless the District appropriations bill contains a generous amount for emergency relief the burden of taking care of Washington's unemployed during the fiscal year 1935 will fall on the Federal government.

Allen estimates that $8,000,000 wil be needed for relief work in the District in 1935 and that even the $2,700,000 plus the $1,300,000 already contained in the budget will meet only half this need.

The original District budget, as forwarded by the Budget Bureau, is understood to have been left practically intact by the subcommittee, at least so far as major items are concerned.

This inculdes a Federal contribution of only $5,700.000 and a construction program cut down virtually to a maintenance-only basis.

The report, it is believed, will contain none of the major construction items asked by the various delegations of citizens on the last day of the budget hearings.

"Rabbit Fever" Kills New England Trapper

Boston, Mass., (U.P.)— Death of a Maine trapper from the rare disease known as tularemia, or rabbit fever, has given definite proof that the malady has spread to New England. Massachusetts has revoked all outstanding permits which had been issued for the importation of hares and rabbits from Maine, and cancelled an order for several thousand white hares.

Importation of hares and rabbits into Massachusetts from Western States has been prohibited for many years and limited to New England animals as it was throught that these were free from the disease.

Boy's Party Boosts Warm Springs Fund

Brockton, Mass., (U.P.)— W. Leon Little, jr., 11, who staged a show of his own on the President's birthday in his home and sent the receipts—$1.68—to Mr. Roosevelt for the Warm Springs Foundation fund, received the following letter:

"My Dear Leon: I want to tell you that I am deeply touched not only by your thought of me on my birthday, but also for you wanting to help in the work which we are doing for crippled children. I am sending your letter to the treasurer of the Warm Springs Foundation and you will receive a formal acknowledgment of your gift in due time. Very sincerely yours, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

4 of Cabinet Delve in NRA Price Fixing

Wallace, Perkins, Cummings, Roper Seek U.S. Relationship.

The entire question of the relationship of the Government to price-fixing is being studied by a committee of four members of the Cabinet, it was revealed yesterday. The members are Secretaries Wallace, Roper and Perkins, and Attorney General Cummings.

Under provisions of many of the codes, price-fixing is permissible and even obligatory. Heretofore, the Government, through the Federal Trade Commission and anti-trust laws, has frowned on and made illegal the practice of price-fixing within an industry.

Recently, the Federal Trade Commission expressed its opposition, at least by implication, of the practice of price-fixing within the steel industry.

The conflict between NRA and the commission, as well as between NRA and anti-trust legislation, has brought forward the question of policy and the future activities of NRA, which has countenanced and even encouraged price-fixing as a matter of protection within an industry.

No Policy in Mind.

It was learned that the Cabinet committee had held at least one meeting to consider the subject of price policy and that it will report to President Roosevelt on his return from the South. It was said that the committee had before it no definite plan and that it was setting about adoption of policy without preconceived ideas of what that policy should be.

While the steel industry has been singled out recently as an outstanding example of price-fixing, it was pointed out that nearly half the 372 codes already promulgated contain some price-fixing provisions. Among these is the code of the distilled liquor industry, under which the industry already has posted two sets of liquor prices since it came into active existence with repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

The investigators are going into the question whether, with production costs predetermined to some extent by the codes, prices should not also be predetermined. The consumers advisory board of NRA has indicated that it is not in complete accord with price-fixing practices.

Before NRA was created, it was the general policy of the Government and of Congress to outlaw price fixing within an industry as a monopolistic practice in restraint of trade. In some quarters, this had been looked upon as a revolutionary tendency, and Secretary Roper, in discussing the investigation yesterday, referred to "constitutional and orderly revolution," in spite of the consideration of the House Rules Committee of charges that an actual revolution is planned, or already under way.

Open Price Principle.

At the same time Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, had before him the report of the distribution and service trades committee of NRA, appointed at the recent conferences, on the subject of price-fixing.

The committee expressed the opinion that the open price principle offers protection to groups of manufacturers within an industry against cut-throat competition, and to that extent, offers a certain measure of assurance of maintaining a fair average wage level.

"For the protection of both consumers and distributors, manufacturers operating under open price provisions should be required to file prices on all commodities they produce," the report said.

It added that the "administrator should require members of industries making price advances under open price provisions to produce cost records where it appears that unwarranted price advances have been made."

"No effective rule for the purpose of preventing sales below cost," the report said, "can be of benefit to the large majority of retail and wholesale distributors until there is recognition of the principle that base prices must be established which will approximate the invoice or current market cost of the efficient smaller operator, and that sales below such established bases are treated as unfair competition in violation of the respective codes."

Waits on Wage Action.

The committee urged that compliance be effective before further decreases in hours and increases in wages are made operative.

"Reduction in hours and increases in wages before effective compliance is secured will increase the present competitive handicap of those who are loyally supporting NRA," the committee held.

It suggested individual study of industries, distribution and service trades before there is a further change in hours and wages.

Harriman Gets Task of NRA Reorganization

sentatives of the American Federation of Labor have lost much of their enthusiasm for it.

Johnson, in his speech before the code authority conference three weeks ago, declared that 99 out of every 100 company unions were under pressure of employers.

The reorganization plans, which were circulated in an office memorandum Monday, put Harriman in charge of a move to advance NRA to the administrative stage. Nearly 400 codes have now been drawn, with 95 per cent of American industry included therein. The major task now is to make the code machinery function.

Three policy boards will be established to consider problems of labor, trade practices and organization of code authorities. Chairmen of these boards have not yet been chosen. In addition, each of the seven divisional directors will have assistants for enforcement, code authority organization and administration.

These assistants will operate through Harriman's policy boards, which will then transmit problems, if necessary, to the compliance division. The latter will decide whether to remove Blue Eagles or to relegate disputes to the Federal Trade Commission or the Department of Justice.

A Litigation Department.

For speedier adjustment of complaints, a litigation division was created, in order to relieve the Department of Justice of its present burden of NRA cases. This division, though managed by Donald Richberg and the NRA legal staff, will function under the Justice Department.

Harriman is a close personal friend of the President. His sister, Mrs. Mary Rumsey, is chairman of the Consumers Advisory Board. Harriman, Mrs. Rumsey and Vincent Astor are also associated in the publication of "Today," a weekly magazine of which Raymond Moley, former head of the "brain trust," is editor.

25,000 Prussian Youths Will Seek 'Culture' on Farms

Berlin, March 28 (A.P.).—Because "physical and character education can not be taught, but must be experienced," 25,000 boys and girls being graduated from Prussian schools this spring will be sent to farming districts for a year's work and play.

A law promulgated by Bernhard Rust, Prussian commissioner for culture and education, and approved today by the Prussian State Ministry, held that such training will educate the youngsters "spiritually, physically and harmonically."

During the year the law will be in operation, boys and girls in the largest Prussian cities on finishing public, grammar and high schools will be distributed in groups of 30 throughout the Prussian farming communities. They will be accommodated in special homes.

If the experiment is successful, all graduates of Prussian schools will be forced to spend a year on a farm.

Indians Favor Self-Rule Bill

Collier Reports Measure Fought by Selfish Interests.

The majority of Indians are strongly in favor of the land and self-government Indian bill now before Congress, John Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, reported yesterday to Secretary of Interior Ickes.

Collier returned yesterday from a tour of the principal Indian tribes, during which he explained terms of the pending bill.

Collier said he detected an organized campaign on the part of real estate interests to defeat the bill in order to continue depredation of Indian land.

He said he intended to lay facts about the propaganda campaign before Congress. He added, "selfish interests which have fattened at the expense of the Indian" are at work in Washington to defeat the bill.

De Priest Busy With Illinois Election.

Representative De Priest (Republican), Illinois, yesterday obtained the consent of Speaker Rainey by telegraph to delay consideration of his resolution to investigate the management of the House restaurant until after April 10. De Priest explained that he would be unable to be present April 9 as the primaries in his district will be held on April 10. Since De Priest obtained 145 signatures to his petition, the Rules Commitee has decided to report the resolution.

Senate Revolts, Overrides Pay Veto, 63 to 27

5-and-5 Plan Is Made Law; Soldier Benefits Are Increased.

sion to a close. Senate officials rang the bells, which indicated the Senate had recessed when the Vice President showed no inclination to return to his dais, and Senators and the spectators from the House walked out.

It was the first time Congress had gone directly counter to the commands of President Roosevelt. It marked the President, too, with the same vulnerable heel of Achilles possessed by his predecessors, whose vetoes of veterans' legislation have consistently been overriden since May, 1924, when Congress enacted the adjusted compensation certificate law despite a veto.

Fifth Veterans' Veto Beaten.

Passage of the independent offices bill yesterday marked the fifth time Presidential vetoes have been overridden on veterans' legislation.

The bill provides for restoration of 5 per cent of Government salaries, effective February 1. This retroactive provision was objected to especially by the President in his veto message. It provides for return of another 5 per cent, effective July 1, and authorizes the President to restore the other third of the 15 per cent pay cut if living costs have reached and gone beyond 1928 levels by next January 1.

The measure does not carry specific appropriations for payment either of the increase in salaries or benefits to veterans, but contains a general appropriation clause for that purpose.

29,000 Veterans Affected.

Approximately 29,000 veterans whose disabilities were presumed to have connection with their war service, but who had been stricken from the benefit rolls under the economy law are put back on the rolls permanently at 75 per cent of the amounts they formerly collected from the Treasury. President Roosevelt asked, and Administration leaders in both House and Senate fought, to make their claims subject to review by boards.

Veterans' advocates in both houses jeered at the proposal, declaring it meant simply that the men soon would be thrown off again. They derided the review boards and said bitterly that the appealing veteran had no chance before them.

Several thousands of Spanish-American War veterans and their widows and orphans, who were stricken from the rolls because they could not prove their disabilities were connected with the war service, also are restored permanently to the rolls and not subject to review of their cases. They, like the World War veterans, will get 75 per cent of their former pensions.

President Roosevelt, in his veto message, said the increased veterans' benefits and the partial pay restoration provisions made the total carried by the bill $228,000,000 more than his budget estimates.

Of this total, it was estimated something like $100,000,000 would go to veterans and $125,000,000 to Government employes.

The vote to override the veto came at the end of seven hours of debate, which ranged from calm, temperate analysis of the situation to blatant and vituperative speeches.

Throughout the day the galleries were crowded and long queues stood in the corridors outside gallery doors waiting a chance to get in. All seats were filled and men and women sat on the steps and stood along the walls of the galleries.

Many From House.

Every seat not occupied by a Senator was ocupied by a member of the House and scores of others stood along the walls and sat on couches in the rear of the chamber. The jam of House members grew so that at the end of the heated debate many were sitting on the floor.

Representative Bertrand H. Snell (Republican), of New York, minority leader of the House, was one of those who smiled as the heretofore all-powerful President was given his first check with the aid of more than a score of members of his own party. Mrs. Snell sat in the gallery throughout the day with Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, daughter of the former President Roosevelt and widow of the last Republican Speaker of the House. Wives and daughters and friends of Senators filled the gallery reserved for members.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, who had charge of the bill in the House; Representatives Connery (Democrat), of Massachusetts; Patman (Democrat), of Texas; (Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi; Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, and other ardent advocates of the veterans crowded the Senate to listen to debate and shout with glee when the result of the vote was announced.

Drama in Battle.

There were touches of the dramatic about the battle. Senator Peter Norbeck (Republican), of South Dakota, has been absent throughout the session because of a serious throat ailment. His ruddy complexion changed to an aging and wan gray, the Senator made his first appearance on the Senate floor in the early afternoon. He had flown here to stand with his Republican colleagues against the President. His throat was swatched in bandages.

Senator McCarran, who had not believed the President would veto the bill and had left Washington to make a speech, took an airplane back to get here in time to vote to override the veto.

Senator Cutting (Republican), of New Mexico, who supported Roosevelt in 1932, launched the debate which was to end in overruling of the Chief Executive by a margin of two extra votes. Two-thirds of those voting were needed to pass the measure over the veto. Ninety of the 96 Senators voted. Sixty-one votes were necessary to override.

Democratic leaders seemed to begin the battle expecting defeat.

Hits Budget Distinction.

"The time for action has come," Senator Cutting began. "Previous votes on this question have been largely a sparring for position. This is the decisive vote which shall determine whether we are going to do something substantial for the disabled veterans.

"This is not a question of repudiating the President. I supported the President in the campaign and I will do so again. Senators owe it to their constituents to vote their convictions. The President's distinction between extraordinary and recurring expenditures, in connection with balancing the Federal budget, is a mere paper distinction."

"There are differences of opinion which can not be, as some have sought to do, account for solely on the ground of sympathy or lack of sympathy for the veterans whose interests are somewhat directly involved in the dispute," Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, said in reply. Vainly asking for votes, he accorded to Senators the right to varying views, but pleaded that the question not be made a patrisan issue.

Urges Limit on Expense.

"It is not just, as some have attempted to do, to place the President in the attitude of not comprehending or of failing to demonstrate a sense of justice, and of patriotic recognition for the galantry, the courage and the heroism of those who have worn our uniform during the conflict referred to," he said.

"It is my purpose to show that there is no injustice, that there is liberality toward the veterans, in the measure and the arrangements affecting it, as contemplated by President Roosevelt.

"I do not believe, in view of the history of this controversy, that the conclusion can be fairly reached that those who voted to concur in the House amendments estopped themselves from voting to sustain this veto.

"The attitude expressed by the Chief Executive involves a subject that can not be passed over lightly. It raises the question whether we are to have a wide open system of veterans benefits and a wide open program of recurrent Federal expenditures with the sky as the limit.

Differences in Bills Cited.

"There is a very notable distinction between the Byrnes proposal and that incorporated in the House provision. The Byrnes proposal did provide for the restoration of all presumptively connected cases to the roll, and also looked to an appeal of all the many thousands of cases that had been decided by the boards created under the President's executive order, but it did not contemplate keeping on the rolls those who were found not to be entitled to that recognition. It did contemplte his final utterance if upon full investigation it was disclosed that the injuries of which he complained were not or could not have been service-connected.

"There is not one who hears me who can not recall the condition of this country a few months ago. We were fighting then over the question whether the resources of tihs great Nation should be commandeered in a sense for the benefit of those who were suffering from want, hunger and cold.

"We had millions of deserving citizens, citizens who are equally deserving with our veterans, who were out o femployment, who were unable to secure an opportunity to earn a living, who had no incomes and who, together with their dependents, were facing suffering and despair, and it was decided to embark upon a new policy, one radically different from any that had ever before been adopted by the Federal Government, and we did make arrangements by which millions of dollars were used in supplying food to the hungry and shelter to the needy.

The President's Vacation Yacht

The yacht Nourmahal, owned by Vincent Astor, New York millionaire, will be President Roosevelt's home for the next week as he takes a fishing trip on the warm waters of the Caribbean. The President left Washington on Tuesday, headed for Jacksonville, Fla., where he will go on board the yacht.

Cherry Fete Crown To Miss Roosevelt

m., coronation of Miss Roosevelt as "Queen of the Cherry Blossoms" at the Tidal Basin. The coronation ceremonies are to be followed by a horse show, in which famous Virginia Hunt Clubs will participate in full costumes. The lighting of the cherry blossoms will take place at 8 o'clock, with artificial moonlight being used for illumination. This will be the first time the buds have been lighted.

Aerial Circus Second Day.

On the second day there will be formation flying of squadrons of Army and Navy planes, with special flying features, taking place over the Tidal Basin. This will start at 11 a. m. The day parade will start at 2:15 p. m., with its disbanding point at the Tidal Basin. The route of the parade has not been definitely set. The trees will again be illuminated at 8 p. m., followed by a fireworks display.

The operetta "Mikado" will be presented at 2 p. m. on the third day in the Sylvan Theater. Simultaneously a regatta will be staged at the Tidal Basin. In the evening the tree will again be lighted and a repetition of the day parade will be held. The three-day festival will be concluded with a ball, which has been tentatively arranged for the Willard Hotel.

Postponement Possible.

While the festival has been tentatively set for April 12, 13, 14, it is possible that it may have to be deferred for another week. The committee will make an inspection of the blossoms within the next few days. Accompanying the committee will be horticulturists who will predict when the flowers will be in bloom.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer announced that arrangements have been made to place signs on all arterial highways to direct visitors to the Tidal Basin. This service will be supplemented by booths at all main entrances to the city by the American Auotomobile Association. Autoists may secure maps of the city, showing the location of the principal festival events.

Many railroads have announced their intention to run low-rate 15-day excursions during the festival, the committee announced.

President Puts Cares Behind, Steams to Sea

nodded at the head of an automobile procession, that wended through the heart of the city.

At the dock he was greeted by Vincent Astor, bronzed owner of the Nourmahal, as other old shipmates, clustered along the rails, removed their pipes and smiled welcome. Said Astor as the President started up the gangplank: "It's great to have you with us, Mr. President."

"I'm glad to be going aboard again," replied Mr. Roosevelt, while cameras clicked and a throng of several hundred applauded.

Joshing about the white suits with newspapermen and conversing with others aboard ship, the President stood in overcoat for pictures. Then, with Astor directing maneuvers from the bridge, the Nourmahal backed into the St. Johns River and came about for the 18-mile cruise to the open sea.

With the destroyer Ellis shadowing, the Astor yacht headed for the Gulf Stream where the President hopes for luck with the sporting bone fish and fighting barracuda. It was much the same trip he took last year, with the same carefree companions—not a politician nor Federal official among them.

Sholtz Discusses Canal.

Gov. Dave Sholtz of Florida accompanied him on the train to Jacksonville and, with Mayor John T. Alsop, discussed the trans-Florida canal, in which the President is still keenly interested, despite discouraging reports from engineers. The proposed $200,000,000 canal, which Secretary of War George H. Dern, incidentally, arrived here today to inspect, would cross Florida from the Atlantic to the Gulf.

Lining the Nourmahal's rails as she put it out to sea were the President, his son James, Astor, Kermit Roosevelt, a distant cousin, Dr. Leslie Heiter, Mobile, Ala.; Judge Frederick Kernochan, George St. George, William R. Stewart and Lytle Hall, all of New York. It was an informal party gotten together by Astor, with the President one of the guests.

Also board were two secret service operatives and Hermann Gray, noted fishing guide of Miami, who will direct the sport. The yacht carried several sizable motorboats which will put over the side for fishing.

One of the largest and most luxurious private boats under the American flag, the Nourmahal is manned by several score white-clad sailors.

Meanwhile the remainder of the Presidential party, headed by Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre, continued southward to Miami where the President is expect to disembark April 6. McIntyre tonight set up headquarters at the Miami Biltmore and will keep in daily radio communication with the Nourmahal.

Facing Eviction, Wife Takes Poison

West Virginia Woman May Die of Potion.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 28 (Spl.).—Distraught by failure to obtain a Government loan to save their home, and ordered to vacate by April 1, Mrs. Elizabeth R. Brillhart, wife of Jesse T. Brillhart, this city, took poison at her home last night and today was in a critical condition at a local hospital.

The Brillhart estate has been in the process of settlement for some years, three heirs being interested. Recently it was sold at public auction here. Efforts to get Government assistance for the property failed because of technical difficulties regarding title.

Mrs. Brillhart was formerly Elizabeth Schlotterbeck, of Hagerstown and Baltimore. Her husband has been active in Socialist party affairs in this State, having been the nominee for Congress in 1932. He operates a grocery store here.

new bill would largely do away with such deductions. It would strike at tax avoidance, too, through provisions tightening administrative laws and those relating to consolidated returns and personal holding companies reorganizations.

Measure Itimized.

The committee estimated the additional revenues of the Government from the various provisions as follows:

Capital stock and excess profits taxes, $95,000,000; increases in estate tax rates, $7,000,000; changes in income tax rate structure, $20,000,000; administration of depreciation allowances, $85,000,000; capital gains and losses, $30,000,000; personal holding companies, $20,000,000; exchanges and reorganizations, $10,000,00; consolidated returns, $20,000,000; partnerships, $5,000,000; administrative changes in gas and oil tax, $18,00,000, and miscellaneous provisions, $20,000,000.

"These measures are believed necessary," the committee said, "first, because of the heavy emergency expenditures of the Government, and second, because of the fact that many excise taxes under existing law will be automatically repealed on July 1, 1935.

"The cpaital stock and excess profits taxes, if imposed on a permanent basis, will add stability to our tax system and will produce sufficient additional revenue to give assurance of a balanced budget by 1936."

treaty with the United States" and that the government is not planning Insull's deportation should he later be found living in some Rumanian village.

Hard on the heels of reports that Insull had changed ships at the Island of Rhodes, in the Aegean, the Maiotis glided out of the early morning mists and appeared in the Dardanelles Straits.

The captain signaled to Turkish officials that the vessel was en route to Rumania. This was in compliance with a Turkisn regulation.

The Sea of Marmora was calm as the Maiotis entered it, in contrast to the storms Insull's "yacht" has encountered since putting out from Piraeus, Athens' port, early Sunday morning, March 18.

Martin Insull Back In Chicago for Trial

Chicago, March 28 (AP).—Martin J. Insull was brought home tonight, accused of embezzling $364,720 from the utilities companies he once directed.

Two years ago he was president of Middle West Utilities Co., ruling with his elder brother, Samuel, power and light, gas, coal and kindred investment companies whose $3,000,000,000 properties girdled the United States.

He came home to face a trial on charges of larceny and embezzlement.

United States immigration officers detained him long enough at Detroit to lay the foundations for immediate deportation to Canada, if Illinois failed to prove him guilty.

John Irwin, a commission merchant, tendered his $50,000 home toward the $50,000 bond required for Insull's release. The property had been approved but termed insufficient, and hurried arrangements to raise $5,000 more were being made.

Arraignment, it was expected, would take place tomorrow.

Democrats Say G.O.P. 'Hogged' CWA Pay Roll

Albemarle Party Council Orders Inquiry Into "Patronage."

Charlottesville, Va., March 28 (Spl.).—Three Democratic organizations of Albemarle County today started an investigation intended to show that Republicans in this territory have fared better at the hands of work relief agencies than the Democrats themselves.

A committee of nine members has been appointed to seek proof of charges that "patronage" has been "improperly distributed" and that key positions in the local Civil Works organization have been allotted to Republicans at the expense of well-qualified Democrats who also needed jobs. The committee was chosen at a joint assembly here last night of the Charlottesville Democratic committee, the Albemarle County Democratic committee, and the executive committee of the Young Democratic Club of Charlottesville. Thirty-five leaders attended.

Resolutions were adopted declaring numerous complaints and criticisms have been made in the past year that those in authority failed to properly distribute patronage and apparently failed to recognize loyalty to party, ability and necessity of the individual in selection and promotion of governmental employes."

The investigators were empowered to look into "the aforesaid criticisms and complaints" and instructed to report back in writing. Citizens of Charlottesville and Albemarle County were requested to provide such "information as may be pertinent to the charges and criticisms" made.

The committee is composed of Raymond Jackson, county chairman; E. V. Walker, vice chairman of the city committee; Jesse Wilson, president of the Young Democratic Club; Bernard Chamberlain, Stuart Fitzhugh, A. V. Conway, W. T. Dettor, and two members yet to be named.

McLane Tilton 2d, city committeeman and former secretary of the University of Virginia Alumni Association, stated that 195 students there have had $15-a-week jobs under Federal work relief projects, many of whom were not residents of this State.

It was mentioned that the CWA had nearly finished its job, but committeemen said they had in mind the Federal emergency relief program scheduled to start April 1.

He was then dragged into a field and beaten by the three men with their revolvers.

Art Commission Plans Held Costly

Virginia Board Lacking Funds for Museum.

Richmond, March 28 (AP).—The Virginia art commission "will have to revise its figures" Gov. Peery said today after a conference with the commission over a bid of $301,896 for a building for which only $272,000 is available.

The bid was submitted by Doyle & Russell, of Richmond, and covers only actual construction cost. Additional expenses would raise charge for the proposed State museum of art to $330,500, it has been estimated.

Thus the possibility of the State-owned building for its art treasures seemed blocked tonight, but hope was expressed that further conferences between State, Public Works Administration and construction company officials might make the building a possibility. Private subscriptions were responsible for $206,000.

Butler, general traffic manager, as vice-president in charge of traffic, succeeding the late B. W. Herrman, and F. K. Prosser, coal department manager, as coal traffic manager, succeeding the late E. Coast Guard's Work Upheld Proposal for Navy to Take Over Communication Service Opposed.

Norfolk, Va., March 28 (Spl.).—Protesting against the Navy taking over the communication service of the Coast Guard, as proposed in Washington, the Virginia State Port Authority today requested Virginia's delegation in Congress to oppose the proposal. W. A. Cox, port director, wrote Representatives S. Otis Bland, of the First District, and Colgate W. Darden, of the Second, to use their best efforts to prevent passage of the plan.

"Even if the Navy considers the Coast Guard a supplementary system, it is better to have two systems in event that one breaks down," Cox wrote. "Besides, the Coast Guard has proved the efficiency of its system through many a severe trial. I am yet to be convinced that Navy red tape will improve the efficiency of the Coast Guard."

Danville, Va., March 28 (Spl.).—The only fire escape provided on a three-story hotel here where transients have been assigned was found to be stuck yesterday when bureau officials checked it.

The hotel has but one entrance and its lobby is approached by a single staircase.

The fire escape is an iron ladder swung to a pulley counterbalanced by weights. When three men stood on the bottom rung it would not move. The pulley was oiled, the rust removed and the device made serviceable.

Norfolk Power Chief to Fight Rate Increase

City Council Begins War on Company Plan for Higher Charges.

Norfolk, Va., March 28 (Spl.).—H. J. Wagner, director of the Norfolk-Portsmouth Port Traffic Commission, was instructed today by the city council to oppose any increase in the power rates of the Virginia Electric & Power Co.

Gov. Peery today asserted that there was no agreement with the power company that rates should be increased as result of the passage of a bill increasing taxes on gross earnings of the corporation from 1-18 per cent to 3 per cent.

Mr. Wagner was instructed by the council to oppose any increase until a complete valuation of the company's properties had been made by independent agencies to determine whether it is employing a proper rate-making base.

Mayor W. R. L. Taylor yesterday informed the council that the company had applied to the State Corporation Commission for authority to increase its rates because of an additional State tax burden aggregating $170,000 imposed by the last General Assembly.

The rates of the company were ordered reduced in December by 10 per cent.

Staunton, Va., March 28 (Spl.).—The Augusta County supervisors have been informed that the cost of operating the District Home the first two months of this year has been $12 per month per capita. The District Home, located in this county, is where the counties of Augusta, Rockbridge, Albemarle, Bath and Alleghany maintain their poor. On March 1 there were 61 inmates.

Forced Poison Story Upheld In Girl's Death

Coroner Calls Portsmouth Case Murder; Police Say Suicide.

Norfolk, Va., March 28 (Spl.).—With the Portsmouth and Norfolk County police contending that Mrs. Elnora Ferrell, 17, died by her own hand from acid poisoning, and Dr. E. T. Glover, Portsmouth coroner, declaring she was murdered, little progress was made today toward solving the mystery.

The girl, while dying, told police she was seized in the rear of her home at 2 a. m. Sunday by a man who poured the acid down her throat.

There were signs of a struggle where she said she was attacked. One of her shoes was found there, but the poison bottle was missing. Police say she had tried suicide before.

Police Lieut. T. A. Talbot said apparently she was first attacked in the kitchen, although he does not believe the killer waited there for her.

The presence of the lost shoe and pocketbook outside where the ground was illuminated by a street light also might indicate the attack, if there was one, occurred there, he said. He adds, however, that a man would hardly have risked such a bright place for forcing acid on the girl when he could have dragged her around the house into darkness.

Talbot's statement followed action of Dr. E. T. Glover, Portsmouth coroner, yesterday in permitting removal of the body to Henderson, N. C., for funeral. He assigned as the cause of death "undetermined homicide."

Marksville district must pay 30 cents extra for wiping out an indebtedness created by the erection of a high school building in the town of Stanley.

M. Lawler at Luray Monday night.

West Virginian Admits Killing, Police Report

Quarrel Leads to Fatal Shot From Neighbor Mountaineer.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 28 (Spl.).—Joe Bear, 60, a mountaineer, was in jail here today facing a first degree murder charge as a result of a 36-hour questioning by police which ended, they said, in a detailed confession of fatally shooting 18-year-old Charles Kees, a neighbor, Sunday, as Kees stood talking to Ted Clark and Carl Shipper.

Bear told them, officers said, Kees came to his home Sunday afternoon and they quarreled.

Monday morning, Shipper said, he returned to the Joe Bear home, discussed the shooting, and reported to officers. Conflicting stories opened the way for the confession, officials said. All but Joe Bear were released. He is held for action of the grand jury in May.

The profits compare with those of previous years and would have exceeded previous profits except that a reduction of $8,000 for street lighting was made in the tax levy and the cost of coal exceeded by $2,000 the previous year's cost.

May We Go Out to Swim? Yes, Freeze, Say Police

Hagerstown, Md., March 28 (Spl.).—While local authorities do not condone bathing in the City Park Lake, they felt that the chill of the water at this season was sufficient punishment for three men, C. Residents reported the escapade to police, who arrived as the men were dressing.

Cartridges Explode in Fire; Bullets Give Man Hot Chase

Westminster, Md., March 28 (Spl.).—Frank Harman, local truck driver, has discovered what "under fire" means. He doesn't like it.

Harman relates that he parked his truck about 10 a. m. recently behind the Westminster Armory. As he alighted a loud report sounded nearby and a bullet whistled past his head.

Thinking that he was a target for a bandit, Harman ran for a nearby building. Hardly had he reached the corner when another bullet whistled past. Gaining temporary safety behind the brick wall, he stood still and waited. Several minutes passed, and when no other shots were fired, Harman took a cautious look around the corner only to be greeted by what sounded like a machine gun.

He ducked, but not before he had caught sight of flames spurting from a heavy galvanized can.

A short time later the mystery was unraveled when Sergt. Leroy Brown, quartermaster of the armory, remembered having thrown 200 corroded bullets in with the trash. Brown explained that the bullets were damp, and thinking they were incapable of being fired, he had not removed them before burning the trash.

Old Map of Town Found Shows Unrealized Industrial Dreams

Weverton, Md., March 28 (Spl.). Big things were planned for this village nearly a century ago, an old map found by Clinton E. Miller, former school teacher here, reveals.

The map was prepared in 1849 by William Dawson, jr. It will be recorded with the land records of Washington County at the courthouse in Hagerstown.

Whether the plan was only the dream of Dawson or whether others were interested is not known. The map shows the topography and means of transportation, which at that time included the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, Chesapeake & Ohio Canal and ox teams. It also shows general street outlines many times the size of the present town. A high bluff overlooking the town is laid out on the map in building sites, with wide streets.

It was also planned to interest industry in a site for a cotton mill, also shown on the map. There also were sites selected for another manufacturing plant and a stone sawing mill, a church and a hotel.

Dawson apparently saw the possibility of waterpower from the Potomac River, and believed this town was an ideal site for a manufacturing center, for a dam in the Potomac was indicated.

The C. & O. Canal at that time was one of the most important transportation routes in this section, operating from Georgetown to Cumberland, and it was planned to push through the mountains a tunnel above Cumberland to connect with the Nation's Capital with the Ohio Valley.

It will make a thorough analysis of economic trends in the State with the purpose of finding permanent cures for unemployment and enable the jobless to live without Government relief.

The program already has been started in Mingo County, where there has been much idleness among coal miners. Through the efforts of the county relief administration, a goat-breeding industry is being developed there.

Charleston, W. Va., March 28 (Spl.).—Final effort of the House of Delegates to obtain additional compensation for its members is expected to be taken to the supreme court for determination.

At the direction of a House committee, W. W. Martin, sergeant at arms of the House, obtained copy of an order issued by Edgar B. Sims, State auditor, refusing to honor a draft for $14,100 for distribution to delegates on a basis of $150 each.

Delegate James Kay Thomas (Democrat), Kanawah, chairman of the committee authorized to investigate taxation with an understanding that its expenses would be split up among the membership, indicated that he would ask the supreme court for a writ of mandamus to compel payment.

Sims refused to honor this and similar additional compensation drafts on the ground that the State constitution limits pay of legislators to $500 a year each plus one mileage allowance for each session.

Labor Wary Of Wagner Bill, Ready to Fight

Fears Modification Will Curb Unions in Favor of Company Units.

By Raymond Clapper.

Labor, having accepted some unpleasant features of the automobile strike settlement, is apprehensive now over attempts to emasculate the Wagner labor disputes bill, aimed at company dominated unions.

Some labor leaders said yesterday that if Senator Wagner modifies his bill in the manner reported in newspaper dispatches, they would have no hesitation in opposing its passage.

However, Senator Wagner said he had not determined upon the exact nature of the changes he would make. The New York Senator, who has long championed labor causes, made it clear that his purpose still was to enact legislation which would bar any company union dominated by employers. He has never, he said, opposed the company union free of employer domination.

As the Wagner bill stands now, it would forbid an employer to "initiate, participate in, supervise or influence" the formation of a company union. The Senator is agreeable to suggestions that the words "Initiate" and participate in be stricken out. He believes that the original language might prevent an employer with the best of intentions toward his workers from suggesting that they organize for bargaining purposes. It might also, Senator Wagner believes, prevent an employer from participating in a conference on invitation of the employes.

Labor Fears Curb.

Organized labor is most concerned, however, over reports that Senator Wagner intends to modify his bill so that the prohibition on coercive tactics by employers be extended also to prohibit such tactics by employes. Labor fears such a change might result in interference with labor union organization activities. Senator Wagner, while moved in his entire effort by a desire to facilitate organization of collective bargaining, feels that the employer as well as the employe is entitled to protection against coercion. He has no thought that such a change could become an anti-strike provision.

Chairman Connery of the House Labor Committee announced last night that unless the House rules committee brought his 30-hour week measure out on the floor shortly he would circulate a petition to force it out for a vote.

The House Labor Committee reported out the Connery bill several weeks ago. At the time, it was said in some quarters that this action was a gesture to assist the Administration in persuading industry to accept the new 10 per cent reduction of hours and the 10 per cent wage increase proposed during the NRA code conference.

Representative Connery has become impatient at the delay and believes he can obtain 145 signatures necessary to discharge the rules committee from consideration of the bill and thus get it to the House floor.

Point Lost in Auto Fight.

Labor is keeping up a brave face over the automobile settlement and in the sense that this is the first time automobile manufacturers have agreed to collective bargaining at all is generally regarded to have gained some ground in that direction. But at the same time it is compelled by the terms of the agreement to sit down alongside representatives of company unions and other labor groups who may represent employes, when what it sought was an arrangement whereby the organization representing a majority of the workers in a given plant would speak for all of the employes. This gives a new lease on life for the company union and that is a bitter pill for outside labor leaders. It is a loss of ground gained through decisions of the National Labor Board.

Their fear now is that the Wagner bill may be weakened to conform to the terms of the automobile agreement.

Senator Wagner denies any such intention. There is reason to believe that while he welcomed the peaceful adjustment of the strike threat, still some provisions of the settlement were far from what he would like to have seen.

In finally shaping his bill, Senator Wagner expects to bear in mind the necessity of fairness to both employers and employes. As in any question which involves deep-rooted clashes of interest, the result is not likely to be 100 per cent pleasing to all parties. He has been caught in one of the hottest crossfires that has been seen in Washington lately.

As yet, President Roosevelt's attitude is unrevealed. He refrained from indorsing the measure in its early stages, preferreing to see what developed in the discussion over it. While he is believed to favor the general purpose of the bill, it is still uncertain whether he will desire modifications.

At the moment labor has suddenly found itself in a less advantageous position than it was some months ago. Labor leaders were enthusiastic over the collective bargaining guarantee contained in Section 7a of the recovery act. Theoretically, it appeared to be one of the great gains in the history of labor organization and was so hailed. But in practice many discouraging difficulties have been encountered, particularly in the inability of the National Labor Board to take a decisive stand in showdowns such as occurred in the Weirton steel case, where the employer blocked the labor board's attempt to carry out the collective bargaining provisions of the act.

Because of recovery psychology, labor is not in the usual position to force strikes. Public sentiment at the moment is insistent upon no major interruptions to industries which are pushing ahead. It was felt generally in Washington during the automobile strike negotiations that labor could not have walked out without incurring great public condemnation. This made labor's position difficult.

Thereafter labor pinned its hopes on the Wagner bill and now it is beginning to wonder whether it will take a defeat there.

Dr. Abel Gets Kobel Medal For Research

Johns Hopkins Scientist Honored for Work in Pharmacology.

Award of the 1934 Kober medal scientific research to Dr. John Jacob Abel, noted pharmacologist of for outstanding achievement in Johns Hopkins Medical School, was announced last night at Kober day exercises at Georgetown University.

Selection of Dr. Abel was disclosed at a meeting of physicians and scientists in Caston Hall, called to hear the annual Kober lecture, delivered by Dr. Walter Bradford Cannon, professor of physiology at Harvard Medical School. The winner was chosen by the Association of American Physicians.

Dr. Cannon, a National authority on nervous disorders, discussed "The Story of the Development of Our Ideas of Chemical Mediation of Nerve Impulses."

By a coincidence, Dr. Abel, in 1925, was the first lecturer under the Kober Foundation. He was awarded the medal in recognition of his 41 years of distinguished service as professor of pharmacology at Johns Hopkins, rather than for any particular contribution to science this year. The decoration will be presented in the annual meeting of the physician's association next May in Atlantic City.

Dr. Abel has won renown for numerous researches on animal tissues and fluids on the physiological and therapeutical actions of various substances. He received the Research Corporation prize in 1925, the William Gibbs medal, Chicago section of the American Chemical Society, in 1926, and the gold medal of the London Society of Apothecaries in 1928.

He was educated at Michigan, Pittsburgh and Johns Hopkins Universities. Later he studied at the Universities of Leipzig, Strasburg, Heidelberg, Vienna, Berne, Wurzburg and Berlin. He has been awarded special honors and degrees by such universities as Cambridge, Harvard, Yale and John Casimir University, Lwow, Poland.

Dr. Abel is a past president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Directors of last night's program included Rev. John L. Gipprich, S. J., regent of Georgetown Medical School, and Dr. William Gerry Morgan, dean and former president of the American Medical Association.

Awards are made on the birthday anniversary of the donor, the late Dr. George M. Kober, for 40 years dean of Georgetown Medical School.

The medal last year went to Dr. Alfred H. Richards, kidney specialist nad professor of pharacology at the University of Pennsylvania Medical School.

How Senators Argued

Pleas for Support of President and Demands for Justice for Veterans Mingle in Fight Preceding Overriding of Pay Veto.

(Associated Press.)

Some of the arguments in Senate debate on the motion of override the President's veto of veterans benefit and Federal pay legislation were:

Cutting (Republican-New Mexico) veterans leader — "it has been apparent since the economy act was passed that justice for disabled exservice men could be obtained only by a two-thirds vote in both houses" (two-thirds being necessary to override a veto).

Robinson (Democrat-Arkansas), administration floor leader—"Every citizen is expected to yield his service to his country when it is imperiled. One who went to a concentration camp to prepare for service at the front is not be discriminated against, but is not to get any privileges denied to any other citizen who did his part but did not wear a uniform."

Robinson (Republican-Indiana)—"This should be too sacred for politics. I don't care whether the veterans are democrats or republicans, I'm simply fihting for them all."

Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, chairman of the Finance Committee, asked the Senate not to "endanger prosperity and destroy the rPesident's influence."

Costigan (Democrat), Colorado—"President Roosevelt's leadership is not involved. As Chief Executive he is doing his duty as he sees it. As Senators were are called on to do our duty as we see it."

Glass (Democrat), Virginia, suggested that House members had "masqueraded behind the veterans" to eliminate an amendment which would have continued the pay cut for Congress members. He said that "in this time of desperate distress no man should be on the pension roll who isn't entitled to be there. Every unworthy man on the pension roll makes it impossible to that extent for the Treasury to reward every worthy man."

Long (Democrat), Louisiana, sandwiching in a remark during debate between Robinson, of Indiana, and Harrison, of Mississippi: "They are trying to start a bull fight."

Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, presented figures to show veterans' benefits by this country during 1931 and 1932 were more than the combined payments by Great Britain, France and Germany. Cautioning against undue expenditure, he said: "The American people have not a ray of chance to get out of this depression until the Government balances the budget."

Need for U. S. Formed Unions Told Hearing

Wagner Bill Should Be Louis B. Ward Says to Committee.

Twenty-four million unaffiliated American workers should be organized into unions by the Labor Department, Louis B. Ward, Detroit biographer of Father Charles E. Coughlin, radio preacher, told a Senate committee yesterday.

Ward suggested amendment of the Wagner labor disputes bill in conformity with his proposal to unionize common laborers, as distinguished from skilled workers already members of the American Federation of Labor and similar groups.

The witness discredited company unions. He insisted it was impossible to prevent their domination by employers. He argued his plan for organization of workers by the Labor Department would give the employes power to obtain better wages and working conditions. He said the Government should grant the unions a free hand after they were brought together.

Cites Pope's Encyclical.

He introduced in the record the 1931 encyclical letter of Pope Pius XI. He stressed a passage which read:

"The duty of rulers is to protect the community and its various elements; in protecting the rights of individuals they must have special regard for the infirm and needy. For the richer class have many ways of shielding themselves and stand less in need of help from the state, whereas the mass of the poor have no resources of their own to fall back upon and must chiefly depend upon the assistance of the state. And for this reason wage earners, since they mostly belong to that class, should be especially cared for and protected by the Government."

Ward urged redistribution of wealth as the only certain solution of economic problems. He said slavery was abolished because employers found they could hire men for less than they could support them.

Employes, he said, should be restricted from coercion and intimidation as well as employers. Another amendment advanced by Ward would prohibit the worker from striking if such behavior impaired "the right of the employer to enjoy the peaceful conduct of business."

The witness inserted in the record a recent speech by Father Coughlin in which he declared:

"As I conceive it, the time has arrived, this Administration, this year, this month, for the Department of Labor through the Wagner bill to begin to function or else change its name to the Department of Industrial Slavery."

Walsh Promises Change.

John J. Collins, an employe of Sobol Brothers, New York, a Standard Oil Co. subsidiary, protested against any bill to interfere with company unions. Chairman Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, replied the measure would be amended to permit continued operation of company unions so long as they were not dominated by employers.

Guy L. Harrington, representing 200 magazines, charged the Wagner proposal would increase labor disputes. He added passage would "retard and destroy confidence."

Arthur M. Torrey, secretary of the New Jersey Employers' Association, declared workers would not organize if left free to choose their own course of action.

"You and I are two centuries apart," commented Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, the author.

Besides numerous newspaper articles during his 40-year career in the House, Mr. Cremer was the author of three volumes, "The Documentary History of the U. S. Capitol Building and Grounds," "The Records of the Dorland Family in America" and "The Scrapbook of the Sky," a book of verse.

Mr. Cremer is survived by a daughter, Miss Harriet Hunter Cremer, and two sons, Randall Cremer, president of the Frederick Snare Corporation, of New York, and John Dorland Cremer, jr., executive secretary of the Red Cross in Cleveland.

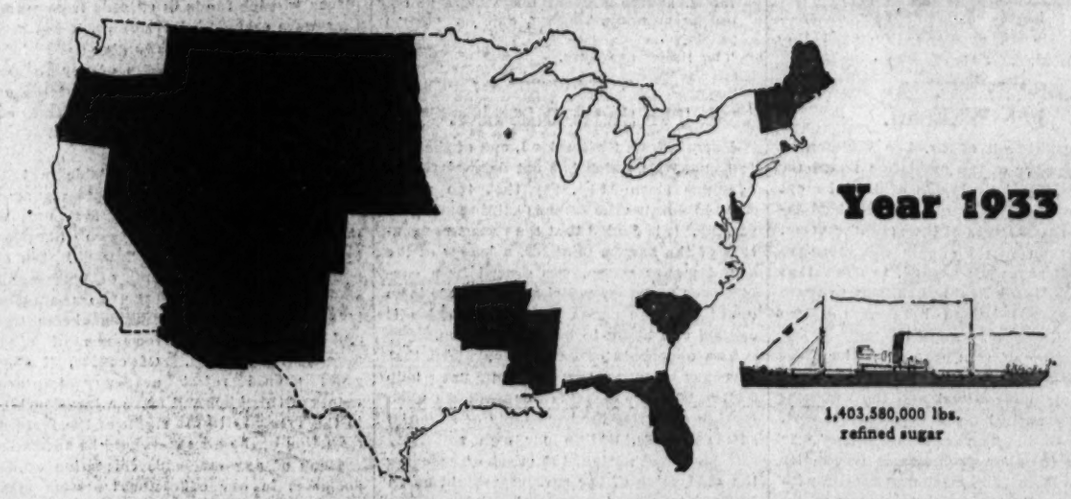
Factories in Tropics Throw Men Here Out of Jobs!



1933 receipts of refined sugar from outside of Continental United States were more than equal to the actual consumption of 21 States and the District of Columbia: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Delaware, South Carolina, Mississippi, Florida, Arkansas, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Idaho, Utah, Arizona, Oregon and Nevada.

THIS is one of those occasions when we believe an industry should state its problem frankly and clearly to the public. The problem concerns not only the thousands of workers in this industry itself, but additional thousands employed to furnish it with supplies. It further concerns those thousands who have invested savings in this and contributing industries, and the 25,000,000 households that are daily users of its products.

While there is every desire, as always, to aid the progress of the Tropical Islands in the production of raw sugar, for which they are best fitted, there is every reason why they should not be encouraged to duplicate refineries that are already operating within the borders of the United States and are ample for the country's needs.

The cane sugar refining industry is facing a swiftly rising flood of sugar refined overseas.

Every pound of this refined sugar brought from overseas displaces a pound that would otherwise have been refined in the United States. Every pound admitted reduces American payrolls and American purchasing power. Already thousands have actually lost their jobs in the refineries of the United States and in supply firms throughout the country. And the flood continues to pour in, threatening other thousands in ever-widening circles!

The cane sugar refiners have been the most important factor in developing in the United States the greatest market in the world for sugar. This fact brought about the progress of our Tropical Islands.

Today United States cane sugar refineries are working part time, although the country eats as much sugar as usual. No adequate safeguards protect them. The United States refiner pays the American scale of wages and operates under the N. R. A. and A. A. A. programs, which do not apply, for instance, to sugar refiners in Cuba.

The remedy lies with Congress which again has the opportunity to say to Cuba and our own Insular Possessions that are on a tropical labor basis, "You will grow the sugar, but our workmen in the United States will refine it."

"Men are never so likely to settle a question rightly as when they discuss it freely."

Nicety In Icebergs.

Wiseacres who dissect the news from Washington have a new nut to crack. How does the Coast Guard manage to retain the services of a man who can foretell that 630 icebergs will reach the transatlantic shipping lanes this season?

As the Government's iceberg prophet, Lieut. Comdr. Edward H. Smith has gained a unique reputation. He studies pressures, storms and various other pre-natal conditions affecting icebergs in Labrador, Greenland and northern Europe. Then he goes into a huddle with himself and comes forth with a hair-splitting forecast. Skippers on the Atlantic during the coming season must look out for 630 sons of glaciers. A natural desire to avert the threatened slash in the Coast Guard's budget might have had some influence in this unusually large estimate, but how shall we account for the audacious precision of this expert? How does he know that this summer's icebergs won't number 631?

If Commander Smith can really prognosticate the flow of ice with such uncanny skill, he should not have remained out of the clutches of the NRA, the PWA and a dozen other instrumentalities of experimentation. Not long ago the prophets of the NRA calculated that 4,000,000 men had gone back to work as a result of its administrations and the PWA duplicated the claim. But the American Federation of Labor's studies of the subject indicate a net gain of only 2,300,000 jobs since last March. On icebergs we are much more certain.

What a premium the AAA would pay for Iceberg Prophet Smith if he could foresee the flow of cotton (in interstate commerce) with the same deadly accuracy that he applies to the products of the polar regions! If the Brains Trust would begin dusting off the forgotten bureaus in the Federal service instead of merely creating new ones, it might yet inject accurate prognosis into the New Deal.

Leo Wolman.

The appointment of Dr. Leo Wolman as neutral member of the mediation board for the automobile industry is said to be not altogether pleasing to either organized labor or representatives of the manufacturers. Their attitude would supply corroborative evidence, if any were needed, to show that Dr. Wolman is admirably qualified to serve as an impartial liaison between the two sides.

The number of men who have the theoretical training, the practical experience, the judicial temperament and the unflinching honesty needed for a task of this sort, is all too small. The economic expert who specializes in labor problems is frequently inclined to identify himself uncritically with the cause of labor, until he becomes incapable of seeing (let alone judging) the larger issues that underlie industrial conflicts. Similarly, the economist who is interested in questions of corporation management and finance is apt to grow indifferent to the claims of labor and may end by becoming a hardened reactionary. The liberal who is really enlightened to the extent of understanding that there is no absolute right or wrong in social and economic relationships is therefore as rare as he is socially valuable.

Dr. Leo Wolman is one of the progressive students of labor problems who has worked actively in behalf of union organizations without ever losing his sense of proportion. He has been criticized for not joining in the ballyhoo that finds the recovery program and its leading exponents above criticism, and he has also been looked at askance for his stanch support of far-reaching social adjustments. That is the type of man needed to represent the public interest in threatened conflicts between labor and capital. That is the type of appointment which confirms the optimism for peaceful relations in the automobile industry first engendered by the wise settlement sponsored by General Johnson and President Roosevelt.

Revenue From Smoke.

It is estimated that the man or woman who smokes a package of cigarettes per day pays nearly $22 per year in taxes to the Government. Last year we manufactured 113,000,000,000 cigarettes or 890 cigarettes for every man, woman and child in the country. We still have a long way to go before each inhabitant will contribute $22 in cigarette taxes to his Government, but we are doing very well. Production continues to mount, although the tax on a 10-cent package of cigarettes equals 60 per cent of the retail price. At the present rate of manufacture, total output for 1934 will be considerably above that of last year.

The cigarette must seem like a life-saver to harassed Treasury officials in these days of shrinking revenues and increased tax resistance. Secretary Morgenthau, however, is not satisfied. He has recommended a reduction in the tax on cheaper cigarettes, presumably with the desire to discourage home manufacture. Theoretically speaking, a 60 per cent tax rate offers a great opportunity for increasing consumption and adding to revenues by reducing the rate of the imposition. But in case of the cigarette prediction is dangerous. Obviously it has a mission beyond that of soothing and satisfying the smoker. It was meant to comfort and encourage collectors of internal revenue.

"And For Other Purposes."

Dr. William A. Wirt, who has been catapulted into national prominence by his assertion that "a deliberately planned American revolution" is in process, deserves credit for just one important and specific contribution.

He has helped to concentrate widespread attention on the fact that much current legislation has implications, and would institute changes, going far beyond the immediate evils at which it seems to be directed. The fact that a number of measures sponsored by the Administration have no connection with economic recovery, and are far more likely to protract the depression than to shorten its course, is what Dr. Wirt has very properly emphasized. The only virtue accruing to the Gary school superintendent in making this point, which is far from being his original discovery, is that he has done it in a way which arrests attention.

Much of the good in this focusing of public interest will be lost, however, if an essentially valid thesis is allowed to degenerate into a red-hunting scare, or is distorted out of its true proportions to pretend that any responsible member of the Administration works covertly from a communistic philosophy. Indeed, the most far-reaching of the changes sought by certain current legislation appear to aim at a reversion to primitive democracy rather than a leap toward Sovietization. But this does not alter the fact that there is on foot a surreptitious attempt to revise our economic system in a way which would cause profound dislocation without advance consideration of the costs.

The issue at stake is of first-rate importance. But it will be obscured and lost to sight if it is treated with superficial contempt on the one hand, or as a case for calling out the Marines on the other. If members of Congress really want to find out what the noise is all about their course is simple. That course is not to find out what brain-trust members approve the Civil Liberties Union, which is purely their own business. The correct course is, for example, to read, digest and analyze the 63 pages of H. R. 8720, which provides:

> * * * for the regulation of National securities exchanges and of over-counter markets operating in interstate and foreign commerce or through the mails, and to prevent inequitable and unfair practices thereon, and for other purposes.

The Swiss Dilemma.

Reports from Switzerland, one of the very few countries which has not depreciated its currency since 1914, say that the movement to devalue the franc is gaining strength rapidly. It is denied that the recent resignation of the finance minister, a leader of the sound money group, was caused by a conflict over monetary policies. But there is no doubt that the Swiss financial situation is critical and likely to become more so.

The opponents of devaluation affirm that currency depreciation would not help Switzerland, which is dependent upon foreign countries for her supply of essential raw materials. Unlike our own relatively self-contained nation, the effect of reducing the gold value of the currency would be an immediate rise in domestic living costs. That in turn would force an upward readjustment of wages, salaries and general production costs, with attendant political and social disturbances. The situation is quite different from that prevailing in countries in which foreign trade constitutes only a negligible fraction of domestic business or one in which the dependence upon imports is not so great.

Another reason for opposing devaluation grows out of the fact that Switzerland is a country of small capitalists—people whose savings would suffer from inflation. The country also has provided a refuge for expatriated foreign capital and any tampering with the currency would mean hasty withdrawal of these funds.

The advocates of devaluation, on the other hand, present familiar arguments in favor of inflation, as an alternative to further deflation, which seems unavoidable if Switzerland is to sell abroad and attract the tourist trade upon which she places such great dependence. In Switzerland, as elsewhere, popular antagonism is aroused by efforts to cut the salaries of government employes and other workers. Then, too, debts, public and private, become increasingly burdensome as deflation proceeds.

Adjustments of some sort may have to be made eventually, because the country is not at present able to cover its payments abroad by receipts from abroad. Exports have declined drastically, as have receipts from tourists and revenue from foreign investments. The country is not paying its way, but living on its reserves, which can not continue indefinitely. Business is stagnant; tourists have been frightened away by the relatively high prices (in gold) that must be paid. The railways show a deficit, and budgets of the federal and cantonal governments are out of balance.

So the Swiss are torn between what they regard as a choice of evils. Devaluation of the currency would be a serious blow to their prestige as an international money market and also a cause of internal disturbance. It is reason for legitimate pride that the country has the same gold franc now as 20 years ago. But further deflation would necessitate continuing sacrifices which an increasing number of citizens evidently believe are too great to be risked.

In Tune With The Times.

In a radio address predicting dire consequences to American industry if the Administration's reciprocal tariff bill should pass, Senator Robinson of Indiana declares that the proposed law would be a step toward internationalism in a world "replete with rabid nationalism." Pointing out that "quotas, embargoes and trade limits are the order of the day," he asked. "How can we with prudence and safety embark on a policy which is out of tune with the times?"

Without doubt we are living in an age of nationalism run wild and that is precisely the reason why we seek an escape from the vicious circle of restrictive commercial policies which is strangling world trade. Senator Robinson would have us meet rising barriers to our own exports by maintaining insurmountable walls against imports, instead of by cooperative effort to remove some of the impediments which injure everybody. This sort of policy would, if carried on long enough, inevitably end in complete commercial isolation for the participants. Already tremendous progress has been made to that end. It is just because quotas, embargoes and trade obstructions are the order of the day that it has become necessary to devise ways and means of mitigating their mutually destructive effects.

The actual tariff concessions that might be made at the present time in exchange for counterbalancing advantages would probably be scarcely perceptibly injurious, and Senator Robinson might more closely survey our present circumstances before he predicts the ruin of American industry and American farmers if the tariff bill should pass. For many, ruin might well be averted rather than induced by adjusting our commercial policies to the needs of the time. Obviously that need is to make headway against the rising tide of nationalism that is creating ever new obstacles to the sale of American products abroad.

A policy designed to combat this trend is not out of tune with the times. On the contrary, it is a proceeding for which the chief argument is found in the peculiar conditions now prevailing. The United States is conspicuous among trading nations for its failure to recognize the advantages of bargaining for trade concessions in a world in which restrictions have become the rule instead of the exception. The pending tariff bill seeks authority to inaugurate that bargaining under what should be the watchful eye of Congress. To intimate that it is free-trade legislation is both misleading and inaccurate.

Taxes Vs. Service.

A request for tax reduction is a logical sequence to the drafting of a subsistence budget for the District. In making its appeal for a reduction of the local property tax rate the Washington Taxpayers' Protective Association is asking Congress to return surplus funds to citizens from whom they were exacted. Heretofore, it has been the practice of Congress to give the Federal Treasury the chief benefits of any surplus in the District budget. Savings at the expense of municipal institutions have encouraged further slashing of the Federal contribution.

All the money that is available in 1935 is urgently needed for the improvement of schools, construction of the first unit of the Municipal Center, branch libraries, bridges, &c., and for relief work. We do not believe that the people of Washington would prefer tax reduction to the maintenance of adequate educational facilities and the efficient performance of other municipal functions. Of course, if Congress should reject necessary improvements of this kind and leave a large surplus in the Treasury to the credit of the District, reduction of the tax rate would be advisable.

Hope of any extensive correction of deficiencies in our educational system must be deferred until Congress again makes an equitable division of financial responsibility for maintenance of the District. The supplemental estimates before the Budget Bureau cover only bare necessities. A considerable addition to the relief fund is reported to be essential. Other items are funds for the Anacostia Junior High School, for a branch library in Georgetown, for the purchase of a site for Jefferson Junior High School and for the preparation of plans for replacement of Chain Bridge. In view of the fact that the District would have a prospective surplus, even if these essential additions should be made to the budget, it would be utterly unreasonable to exclude them.

The vigilance of the taxpayers' association in guarding against excessive and inequitable levies is much appreciated. That organization might extend its usefulness, however, by giving attention to community needs and the manner in which District funds are spent as well as to the tax rate.

The Ingersoll Memorial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Senate has passed a bill permitting a private association to erect on public grounds in Washington a memorial to Robert G. Ingersoll. If the House of Representatives shall agree to action of the Senate, many results will follow.

First, a Democratic Congress will give official recognition to the Republican whose speech nominating Blaine in the Republican convention of 1886 marked him as one of the greatest orators of his day. While it did not secure the nomination of Blaine, it made particularly effective Ingersoll's campaign speeches for Hayes and against Tilden.

Second, Congress will honor a man whose only direct connection with National affairs was his defense in 1883 of Senator Stephen Dorsey, charged with conspiracy in connection with the "star-route" frauds. Ingersoll procured first a mistrial and then an acquittal of Dorsey. Although he did not vindicate his client, he won a triumph for himself.

Third, Congress will aid in setting up in the National Capital a memorial to "the great agnostic." A man of personal charm and correct life, Ingersoll's lectures on "Some Mistakes of Moses" "The Gods" and "The Devil" were listened to by tens of thousands. In published form they still have a very large sale.

Completion of the Ingersoll memorial legislation would mark this Democratic Congress as an example of nonpartisan, forgetting and forgiving, liberal-minded legislative bodies. To be sure a Republican Congress permitted a statue to the orator, William J. Bryan, but he was once a Secretary of State. Also a Republican Congress authorized the Stone Mountain coin, bearing the effigies of Gens. Lee and Jackson; but those soldiers have now become National characters.

Perhaps the statue of Ingersoll would be placed opposite that of Bryan. During their lives the two men were opposed to each other on every question. In bronze they might be allowed to fight out their contentions.

"The Love of Money——"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let me congratulate the management of The Post in the vast improvement it has made since I was last in Washington. I note that it carries a great variety of National and church news equal to any daily in the world. Surely The Post does its part in giving the history of a day.

America is now reaping what she has sown for more than 20 years. As a Nation we forgot God and went far afield after gold and pleasure. This is the cause of our condition. When we as a Nation come back to God we shall have better times and not until then. C. H. MORRIS.

Racial Suicide.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent issue of your paper contained a statement made by Premier Mussolini which claimed that the white race in America is committing race suicide, and that within 100 years this country would be dominated by the Negro.

Although compilations, based on census figures published in the World Almanac for 1934 indicate that his statement has some basis (Premier Mussolini), evidently did not take in the over-all picture, which shows a net decrease of 2 per cent in the ratio of Negro to total population in the 30-year period, 1900 to 1930. It is true, however, that the percent of increase in the white population has taken a bad tumble—I haven't gone so far as to try to figure out how long it would take, under these conditions, for Mussolini's prediction to come true, but it seems improbable. The Postal Deficit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Postoffice Department is a business and as such should be conducted along businesslike lines. Until this principle is applied there will always be a deficit. Those in a position to know have estimated that the air mail service does not pay one-fifth the cost of maintenance. The Postoffice Department should put into force a regulation requiring all patrons of the air-mail service to prepay all postage on air mail.

The vast rural free delivery service is a constantly increasing burden and is a real cause of many inequalities existing throughout the system. There should be well defined lines drawn so that every community, whether city or rural, should have what it can pay for. The principle of the greatest good to the greatest number is about the wisest program that can be set up in adjusting the system on a properly working basis.

Apples or Applesauce?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The present Administration, inspired possibly by the best intentions, has seen fit to arrogate to itself a type of economy which it loudly denounces when practiced by other and lesser employers!

Mr. Farley's treatment of the wage and employment situation in the Postoffice Department gives point to this statement. Just lately his economies there have not only reduced the wage, but have also practically thrown out of regular work a large number of men. If his reduction of wages had meant the employment of more workers it would have helped the general situation just that much. As it is, his economic mania has added to the ranks of workless and needy! And besides this, it means a reduced, less effective, service for the public. That isn't the kind of economy we need at present.

It was the urge for economy that doesn't economize that brought about so much hardship to Government workers and veterans, a situation which is now demanding drastic revision at the hands of Congress. In any case, what we ought to have is more consideration for the human factor, and much less arbitrary experimentations. Also, if higher wages and shorter hours be such a grand policy for other folks why not for Uncle Sam himself! Or is it possible that what is "apples for the goose is applesauce for the gander?"

Strange Fields.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After a review of our recent Federal attempt to carry the air mail and its disastrous termination, what are we to think of the Army Air Service?

How it must amuse aviators of other nations to read what we read of those failures. It brings to us the question, "What will we do if foreign hostile planes invade our country? Of what use would our air service be to defend us and protect us against such an invasion?

I can not help believing our aviators are all right, but are handicapped in some way. By keeping them year after year hopping about close to home, with an hour or so each day, they get only a rudimentary flying education.

A Call to Noodles.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A number of people were interested in your radio-column announcement of the Wagner hearing from the caucus room of the Senate, upon a subject touching the welfare of society in general and because of the distinguished participants, of highly educational character.

However, just as the subject was being presented and its radio audience feeling the atmosphere of the distinguished setting, suddenly the air was assailed by an impassioned call to noodles—the best on earth doubtless as noodles go—but disquieting at the moment.

Would that some far-seeing radio company might include in its commercial contracts a clause permitting matters of public importance, especially in Governmental affairs, Federal, State, Municipal, to take precedence.

I am looking forward to the day when radio may become an agency in public education instead of a "doubtful pleasure."

The Folly of War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When I heard speakers at the recent anti-Vinson bill dinner at the Washington Hotel say frankly that they were ashamed of their own gullibility in having supported the last war, these very natural comments came to my lips: "We told you so!"

In July, 1920, in Gale's International Monthly I published these words which are more true today than at that time:

"The day is already here when we and all others who opposed the war can taunt the world with its indescribable idiocy, its asinine folly and its criminal stupidity. We have no wish to boast or chuckle—the aftermath is too gruesome and ghastly and horrible. We only wish you could have realized what we realized and listened to the counsel which you so hotly spurned. And we want to brand on your minds and memories forever the blazing truths that you once so contemptuously ignored but that you now can not fail to see."

An Un-Odious Comparison.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please permit me to say that I approve of The Post Impressionist highly. It is a relief to see a "Column" which does not appeal to the cheapest of our mental interests. Usually our "Columns" seem to be intended for only the Tired Business Man. LOUIS HOW.

Biblical Epithets.

Senator Vandenberg drove his colleagues to the Bible recently when, debating with Senator Huey Long, he said Huey's observations on the St. Lawrence Seaway reminded him "of nothing quite so much as the language in the thirteenth verse of the tenth chapter of Ecclesiastes." This citation aroused Senator J. Ham Lewis, who remembered enough of his "Merchant of Venice" to remark: "The devil can cite Scripture for his purpose."

Huey's comeback at Senator Vandenberg was another Biblical passage: "Having eyes, see ye not? And having ears, hear ye not? And do ye not remember?"

It remained for the press gallery to hunt out the passage to which Vandenberg had referred in connection with Huey Long: "The beginning of the words of his mouth is foolishness: and the end of his talk is mischievous madness."

May we refer the junior Senator from Michigan to another quotation from Scripture? St. Paul wrote to the Corinthians: "Charity suffereth Long, and is kind."—Detroit News.

The Post Impressionist

"Fellow Citizens!"

Postoffice, Thursday.

"I'm a Ghost Orator," said he. "Sure. You've heard of ghost writers who turn out magazine stuff for big-name people that haven't time to write? Well, a ghost orator gets up campaign speeches for candidates—municipal, State, National—all over the country. If he's good, he can net $1,000 per working month.

* * * *

"Plenty candidates write their own speeches, but plenty don't. A candidate's a busy man—hasn't time to do half what's expected of him. Voters want him to deliver speeches; he wants to deliver speeches. But speeches aren't the most important part of his work, so many a candidate delegates his speech writing to one of us.

"We're just specialists in data and composition; we don't try to influence a client in his interpretation of the facts we supply. He sketches his policies to us; we turn them into speech form, and he speaks the speeches. That's the layout. The way a fellow put it to me when he was running for Congress a couple of years ago:

"'It'll be only the words that aren't my own, and, you know, when people ask a man to make a speech at a meeting they've gotten up for him, why, they like to think he's taken the trouble to write the piece himself.'

"There you have the client's ethics. We have our ethics, too:

"It's a point of honor with the high-class speech writer not to take a client whose political creed he doesn't share. Often, he'll have a friend who is writing for the opposition candidate, but I've never known either writer to give his client away to his friend. And, lastly, a ghost orator is in duty bound to produce his best, even if his client doesn't know the difference between high grade and low.

* * * *

"There are only a couple of preliminary interviews, for candidates' business hours are crowded. You study your man—draw him out—make him talk—get his ideas and personality. You have to find what we call his 'theme,' his characteristic line—or else make one for him.

"I remember a New England client who needed a slogan when I couldn't frame anything that would sound natural to him. It was while there was considerable grumbling over a possible dole system. Then at last he let drop:

"'I don't believe the American working man wants milk-and-mercy.'

"Mebbe I didn't grab that! It got us at least 3,000 votes. Today I suppose it would lose at least that many.

* * * *

"Also, at the start you sketch a ground plan for your whole job, and send it on to your client; an outline of the number of speeches he ought to make and the subjects they ought to deal with, all dependent on the kind of State or district he lives in and on his own and his opponent's record. But, after those preliminary interviews, you don't see much more of your man. You've got to have your office well removed from his headquarters.

"All you can do is to listen to your client at meetings, write him letters or telephone him criticisms—and that's delicate work. The candidate who employs a speech writer is nearly always a man who wants to be an orator and can't be. As a rule, they're rather lovable; simple and naive. I've yet to meet one who doesn't keep a scrap book of newspaper notices about his speeches, like a prima donna's scrap book. Examples of my work are being preserved by dozens of candidates for transmission to their great-grandchildren.

"The heart-breakers are the clients who won't stick to your text. I remember a client running at the top of the ticket in a highbrow State. His initial speech was to be delivered at a dinner given to all the State candidates of his party, and he'd agreed with me that he must never speak except in a dignified manner. The piece I wrote him started:

"'Gentlemen, this is like Old Home Week, or rather it is like a gathering of zealous veterans and equally zealous recruits who, on the eve of a new battle, celebrate their army's past in fond memory, their army's future in confident anticipation.'

"Well, my man was the first speaker. He hesitated, grinned and then let out:

"'Here we are again—and it certainly feels good to me! It's like the first game of poker with the gang after a business trip.'

* * * *

"One of the trials of our business is to see our best efforts thrown away like that, but one of our consolations is that those efforts aren't often thrown away altogether. My highbrow candidate brought the fact home to me when I tackled him for not having uttered a single sentence of my speech. He said:

"'Oh, well, when I got up there I thought I'd better be kind of informal. I knew my secretary had sent out what you wrote, in the press-releases, and that that was what would be in the newspapers, anyhow.'

"The chances were he'd be wrong, but he happened to be right. The town was a small one, the local newspapers were understaffed, and there'd been a big fire. The reporters merely dropped in to the dinner after he'd spoken, just to make sure that he actually had spoken. They had those releases in their pockets. Nobody thought of asking what my man had really said. So what went out to the general public was what I'd said he was going to say. In effect it was what he did say.

* * * *

"Yes," reflected the ghost orator, "it's a trying business, but it has its compensations. You've got to be up on eloquence and on all local and National issues. Still, it's a satisfaction to know that you're influencing the Sovereign Will of the People. And $1,000 a month is just that . . . ."

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

I NEVER thought I would live to see the day when Senator Arthur Robinson played an important part in our Government. It was always my impression that he could be lopped off without the slightest slowing down of the machinery, that if by chance it did affect us it would be by way of improvement, not in the least a loss.

But to say now that he has not come to be an important figure is to deny an obvious fact. Indeed, at the moment I know of no one who could successfully take his place.

BARGERON.

He is to my knowledge the only one who can outdemagogue the Democrats. He is the counter-demagoguer in the flood of demagoguery we have today.

• • • •

In all of the Democrats' cocky cracking-down, their appeal to undeveloped minds with gestures against those of wealth and the mob-like way in which they heap denunciation upon those who lift their voices in protest, in all of the blood and thunder talk which they have loosened upon the country, there is only one, so far as I can see, who can make himself heard against them.

And that one is Arthur. He can beat them at their own game.

He makes them squirm; he causes the blood to redden their faces; he makes them shift angrily in their seats. He is the only one who can.

• • • •

I do not mean that it is Arthur's logic that does this, or the merits of what he says. It is seldom, in my undistinguished opinion, that there is any logic or merit to his words.

But he has the Democrats' number. He can sling mud as well and shout as loud as they.

Arthur has the hide of an elephant. He will say most anything. And nothing is said of him in return can make him blush. Arthur, to no degree, is of the blushing type. I wouldn't be surprised if he is not the only man in the country equipped to combat the Democrats in these days.

• • • •

In propaganda, in innuendo, he is their equal. He can stir up class hatreds as well as they; he is just as effective in making the "poor" hate the "rich."

I am satisfied the Democrats would give anything to have him on their side. But they haven't. He is in the opposition, the only effective opposition that I have so far seen. It, to my opinion, makes him a very important figure in our National life of today.

• • • •

As a tactician of demagoguery he is without a peer. I have wondered why the Democrats in their great collection, their great round-up, could possibly have missed him. It is their loss that they didn't because, believe me, he is a thorn in their side.

And I want to be of the first to recognize his worth and give him his proper place in the present scheme of things. This is no time for the opposition to seek leadership among those who think and measure their words. Arthur is the man, one who understands the Democrats' game even better than they.

I do not mean to say in this outburst of admiration for Arthur that in my eyes he has increased in stature. It is not that at all. It is simply that the country has come down. Arthur has stood still.

Theater Code Revision Urged

High Labor Costs Scored as Prohibitive to Road Shows.

Road shows could be revived and the performance of legitimate drama renewed throughout the country if labor provisions of the theatrical code were revised to "enable producers to meet operating costs," a theater spokesman said yesterday as hearings were opened on revision of the code.

Marcus Heiman, road "booker," said unions imposed unreasonable demands which kept producers from being able to send their shows to the "provinces."

More than 100 Broadway producers, managers and directors attended yesterday's hearing. Sol Rosenblatt, division administrator, and Deputy Administrator William Farnsworth presided later.

Dr. Henry Moskowitz, of New York, said that only seven out of 78 members of the league of New York theaters were operating at a profit, and blamed high production costs.

Milkman in 'Bottle Death' Exonerated

Jury Rules Self Defense in Fatal Fight.

Harold S. Miller, a milkman, was exhonerated yesterday by a Coroner's jury investigating the death f Richard Winstead, 20, struck with an empty bottle during a street fight March 18.

The jury held that Miller acted in self-defense. Winstead attacked the milkman after smashing the headlights of his truck, it was testified. Miller said the yuth was apparently intoxicated and he repeatedly warned him to "go away."

Winstead, wh lived in the 1600 blck of Avon place nrthwest, died a short time after physicians pronounced his injuries "nt serious."

94th Birthday Celebrated By Soldier of Fortune

Green Bay, Wis. (U.P.).—W. S. Farrington, soldier of fortune of the old school, celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday here in a comparatively calm manner. Farrington, in his youth, rounded the Horn in a windjammer, fought Indians, chatted with Buffalo Bill, trimmed Wild Bill Hickok in a poker game, danced with Calamity Jane and served as a scout with the Union Army in the Civil War.

It was in this capacity that he met and dined with John Wilkes Booth before the assassination of President Lincoln.

Brunettes Kill Selves, Blondes Prefer Murder

London (U.P.).—Gentlemen may prefer them, according to Anita Loos, but a British amateur criminologist asserts that blonds are more murderous than brunettes.

Paradoxically enough, however, Gilbert A. Foan, who also adds penology to his hobbies, estimates that brunettes are more criminally minded. In support of this, he points to increase of crime in big cities, according to French psychologist Duval, brunettes, when they take to killing, kill themselves.

Plot to Kill King Ends In Death Edict for 3

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, March 28 (AP).—A death sentence was passed today against three Croatians convicted of plotting to assassinate King Alexander at Zagreb December 16.

At the time of the plot, rumors that it had been perpetrated were denied as baseless. Alexander shortened his stay in Zagreb, however, and later it developed that the three were arrested in connection with the killing of a detective. The same three were accused of plotting to kill the King.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

THE WINTER GOLFER.

Consider the Winter Golfer.
He is a queer egg.
He employeth the summer to show that he can not play golf and then he useth the winter to prove he is right.
He is not satisfied with suffering six months a year and insisteth on being miserable the balance of the year.

• • • •

The wise man putteth away his clubs at the first cold spell and murmureth "Thank Heaven!" But the Winter Golfer dubbeth around in the snow until the big blizzard and then goeth South that he may make his outdoor life a nonstop squawk.
He spendeth from April to October in a rage and then packeth his bags and hieth to the winter resort so that no season of the year may find him normal.
He maketh a seasonal pastime a year-around ordeal.

• • • •

He spendeth the warm months in a fury and the cold months in a blind rage.
He demonstrateth to the home folks' satisfaction all summer that he is a duffer and a dub, and he playeth among strangers all winter to make the verdict unanimous.
He maketh the summer a time of complaining that the Northern golf courses are terrible, and he maketh the winter a time of lamenting that the Southern fairways are an abomination.

• • • •

He putteth in the warm months using the wrong club and the cold months in not picking the right one either.
From May to October he goeth mad curing a slice, and from October to May he becometh delirious getting it back with interest.
He spendeth half a year crying "What am I doing?" and the other half yelping "What happened that time?"
And he never getteth the rigat answer.

• • • •

He useth six months of summer absorbing punishment in the great open spaces and useth the six cold months proving that he still can take it.
He seemeth bent on showing the world that the woods are habitable the year around, if you enter them with a niblick and a groan.
He proveth the sand trap is a year-round resort.

• • • •

He is not satisfied conceding himself four-yard putts all summer, but putteth in the entire winter breaking 100 in a like manner.
He maketh his wife weary with his complaints, with no seasonal respite.
He boreth his friends, rain or shine, snow or heat wave.
He findeth fault with the golf course architecture in all climates and denounceth the greens committees without sectional restrictions.
He liveth too long.

Women Ask Delay In Ship Building

Ask Vinson Bill Remain "Statement of Policy."

President Rooseelt yesterday was urged to withhold approval of appropriations for immediate building of ships authorized by the Vinson naval bill, in a telegram from the Women's International League.

Asking that the bill be kept a statement of policy rather than a law for construction of warships, the telegram, signed by Mabel Vernon, disarmament campaign director of the league, stated that actual building of ships would make "practically impossible" reduction of armaments, which the President said he hoped to attain in the 1935 Naval Conference.

BURTON KENDALL WHEELER, Senator from Montana. Born near Boston 52 years ago. Learned stenography. Landed a job with a Boston wholesaler. Waited on table, sold books, to work way through University of Michigan Law School. Went to Butte, Mont., in quest of health and a career. Robbed in a poker game, he bluffed the card sharps into restitution. Warned to leave town, he decided to stay. Gained fame as a jury lawyer. Elected to the Legislature in 1910. Woodrow Wilson made him United States attorney for five years. A flaming rebel, Wheeler fought entrenched interests, was bitterly counter-attacked as a Red. Badly beaten for Governor, he came back in 1922 to win a Senate seat. Promptly blazed across the front pages investigating the Department of Justice. A month later Daugherty quit as Attorney General, but had Wheeler twice indicted. He was quickly exonerated by a Senate committee, a Montana jury, a Washington judge. Vice Presidential candidate on the La Follette ticket in 1924. First Democratic Senator to declare publicly for Roosevelt. Crusader for 16-1 silver. Labeled Democrat, he is of the Sons of the Wild Jackass.

Electrically-Charged Seeds Used to Boost Italian Crops

One of Many Experiments Being Conducted in Drive Aimed at Making Nation Self-Sustaining in Agriculture; Need for Food Checked.

Rome, March 28 (AP).—To make Italy as self-sustaining agriculturally as possible, the National Research Council pressed forward today a comprehensive program of experiments to increase production.

Such widely varying studies as the electrical treatment of seeds and the exact relation between nutriment and man's capacity for work are embraced in the investigation.

Already success has been claimed in an effort to bring wheat production up to the level of consumption and, said Guglielmo Marconi, the inventor, who is president of the council, a satisfactory conclusion is in sight for the related activities.

The treatment of seeds by electricity, he asserted today, has been tried on a wide scale to enhance their productivity. More than 3,000 individual experiments have been carried out in this field under the direction of the council.

Investigations into the possibility of raising medicinal plants, he reported, have led to the assurance that in many instances Italy can cease importing drugs and become an exporter.

Scientists engaging in the council's work have formed a chain of 12 university laboratories to study the food values of various farm products and find new uses for them.

New agricultural communities, such as Littoria, which premier Mussolini has created on reclaimed swamp lands, have been put at the disposition of the council for research purposes among their thousands of inhabitants.

A close check is being kept on the colonizers to ascertain how well they have been able to acclimate themselves in the once malaria-infested regions and what effect the new environment has on social conditions and livelihood.

Slur on Film Star Facing Court Probe

Los Angeles, March 28 (AP). Mrs. Curtis charged in the original complaint of her suit for $3,500 back wages as housekeeper for Miss Stanwyck's fatherin-law, William Fay, that the actress induced her to live with Fay.

Never Yet Has a Whip or Chain Overcome an Idea

By Robert Quillen

To the student of history, the present state of the world is merely another return to the way of the primitive.

When our race was young its only means of persuasion was force. If one man desired another to do something or refrain from doing something, his only effective argument was a club.

Ages passed and men learned to obey the laws of a chieftain or a king, but still it was force and not reason that prompted them to obey.

Even the church, when it had become a temporal power, relied on force to save the souls of men.

The unbeliever and the unorthodox were tortured for their sins and the wicked were made good by cracking their bones.

The beginning of liberty was the beginning of true ethics. For the first time in his history, man stood on his own feet and depended on his conscience for guidance. He was like a king.

The responsibility of governing himself taught him honor, morality, faithfulness, patriotism. He began to be a gentleman.

But force had not disappeared from the world. The reign of reason was not complete.

The club and the chief were gone, but rulers remained. And now a dictator, a majority or a fanatic minority made powerful by its unity repeats the ancient error that so long delayed and impeded the development of civilization.

Impatient and annoyed by the world's imperfections, the rulers growl: "Men aren't improving fast enough. Justice isn't winning fast enough. Prosperity isn't coming quick enough. The millenium isn't coming soon enough. Let us use force."

Age after age, year after year, time after time, those who have power lose faith in reason and pick up a club. They attempt to make man good by force, and by force to solve the social and economic problems that are products of unreason.

It never works. Force can lift a man up, but standing alone must be his own idea.

John Quincy Adams.

Of all the Presidents of the United States, John Quincy Adams was the greatest scholar; he was a profoundly learned man. He is also an illustration, if any were needed, that hard work never hurt anybody. In the ordinary sense of the word, he never had any boyhood or youth. He was intellectually mature when hardly more than a child. As a young man, he had difficult diplomatic posts in various parts of Europe. He was President from 1825 to 1829. Then he retired to Massachusetts, thinking his public career was over. But the people of his congressional district asked him to represent them in the National House of Representatives. He accepted this position gladly and served 18 years, dying, when over 80 years of age, in the very current of his strenuous activities.

Today he is becoming an object of steadily increasing interest to historians and biographers. Not only does he fill a larger place in history than has ever been accorded to him before, but numerous books devoted to him and his career have appeared in the twentieth century. Of all these, the most valuable is the condensation of his Diary in one volume by the accomplished Allan Nevins. Adams kept a diary all his life, and in later years it was published in many volumes. It was a great task to select from this vast amount of material the most important and most interesting passages, and present them to the public in one convenient volume; but Mr. Nevins accomplished this very well indeed.

John Quincy Adams was as incorruptible as he was intelligent. He was made of New England granite and succeeded in many of his undertakings by sheer force of character. In Emersonian language, duty never whispered low to him. Duty spoke in stentorian tones. Mr. John T. Morse, jr., described him both wittily and accurately when he said that with Adams the desire to do his duty was always strong; but when the duty was a particularly disagreeable one, the desire became ungovernable.

It would seem that such a man could not have succeeded as a diplomat. But he succeeded by his intelligence and his integrity. He never talked about a subject unless he really knew it thoroughly; and his friends and his enemies knew that he never said anything that he did not believe. Such men are not too often found in political life.

One of the most charming things about this stern, austere, and irascible statesman is that every night in the White House when he composed himself for slumber he repeated the prayer that he had learned as a child: "Now I lay me down to sleep."

D. C. Suspect Held For $50,000 Bond

Women File Charges of Attack and Robbery.

Bonds totaling $50,000 held John B. Walker, colored, for grand jury action in Police Court yesterday when he was arraigned on criminal assault and robbery charges.

Walker, it was alleged, accosted Miss Katherine Karns, first block of Rhode Island avenue northwest, as she walked near Sixth and M streets Friday night. She charged he used abusive language, struck her in the mouth and escaped with her purse containing valuable jewelry.

The man was arrested a short time later on complaint of Mrs. Naomi Azviedo, 1000 block of Fifteenth street northwest. Mrs. Azviedo claimed she was attacked by Walker. Judge Isaac R. Hitt fixed a $25,000 bond on each charge.

Chemists' Magic Turns Liquor From New to 'Aged' in a Hurry

Lamp to Pour Artificial Sun Rays Used to Give Whisky That "In Bond" Taste; Electrical Treatment Also Spans the Years.

By Howard W. Blakeslee
(Associated Press Science Editor).

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 28. Four ways to make new liquor taste old in a hurry are being tested by chemists, Dr. Foster D. Snell, of Brooklyn, told the American Chemical Society today in a joint report with J. Mitchell Fain.

In one method a "liquor-fall" of the fluid is run over a lamp from which artificial sunlight comes. Here the same kind of rays that produce sunburn on the body shine on it and quicken the aging process. A second system produces "liquor soda water" by bubbling air, oxygen or ozone through the spirits in a process suggestive of the making of ginger ale, but using oxygen instead of carbon dioxide. Oxidation of certain materials in the liquors is hastened and the aging process speeded up.

Electricity Also Used.

In another variety of artificial aging electricity is passed through the liquor and oxygen and hydrogen come off as in the case of water if the same thing is done. This process, called electrolysis, is a common means of separating fluids into their constituent parts. One of its newest uses is to concentrate "heavy water" from the normal, lighter kind.

Finally the aging is speeded by using catalysts, substances in whose presence chemical reactions are accelerated, and which produce unusual results without losing anything themselves by so doing. The liquors are heated and a "fog" of vapor is blown over the catalysts. To hasten the formation of esters, the substances that give whisky its aroma, oxides of lead silicon, cerium and uranium are used; for flavors, the catalysts are copper, nickel, cobalt and titanium.

16 Years in One.

No claim is made, Dr. Snell said, that chemists had attained complete success in aging liquors artificially. Intensive research is going on and there is hope that one-year-old whisky may soon rival 16-year bonded liquor in taste and smell and at a vastly lower cost.

Chemists are glad that prohibition is ended, he added, for they no longer have to listen to the pleas of bootleggers for synthetic liquor recipes, or for methods of breaking down the Government formulas by which alcohol was rendered unfit to drink. They can now turn their attention to the problems of the legal distillers.

Kelley Kidnap Suspect Denied St. Louis Bail

St. Louis, March 28 (AP).—Denied bail today in circuit court, after having been identified by Dr. Isaac D. Kelley as one of his kidnapers, Angelo Rosegrant, one of six under indictment, planned to carry his fight for liberty to the Missouri Supreme Court. Judge Robert W. McElhanney also denied bail to Bart Davit, another defendant.

Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, wife of a local physician and charged by the State with being the "brains" in the abduction plot, is at liberty. She was granted bail two weeks ago following her surrender.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

WE now have, as latest wonder of the Synthetic Age, an anthology of short stories combined with an intelligence test.

For in his "Short Story Hits: 1933" (Harcourt Brace, $2), Thomas H. Uzzell arranges his selections in increasing difficulty, each tale making a "more complex intellectual and imaginative demand upon the reader." He puts the matter very plainly: "The further into this collection you can read without falling asleep or developing a headache the brighter you are! If you can, in reading them all, feel a sustained kindly regard for both writer and editor, you may go to the head of the class and begin reading the definitive volumes of Mr. Cabell."

THEO. HALL.

Leaving aside for the moment the question of Mr. Cabell as a laurel wreath, I must say Mr. Uzzell is something less than bashful when he states that we must be bright to like and understand him and his collection. There is about the whole book a "come, little friend, let me lead you" air. Even his own defensive forearming—"I am myself condemned to be a teacher"—does not quite remove a distaste for his bouncing pedagogy.

He divides his catch into four groups according to source—the all-fiction magazines (otherwise known as "pulp-paper mags"), the big circulation, the literary, and the experimental. He gives biographies of the authors, critical comments on the stories and analytical summaries (in which he uses such terms as "thematic-complication-character" type—a reference to his own system of short story dissection treated at length in his "Narrative Technique"). At the end there are several little essays defending the popular short story, praising the "little magazines," attacking the Marxian critics, and suggesting ways in which to study the collected stories.

An aura of optimism surrounds Mr. Uzzell. For amateur writers who like pat definitions and rather heavily constructive advice, his book will be manna from heaven. He has had long experience in guiding beginners, and perhaps this systematizing and classifying is the way to do it.

• • • •

But the book is far more than thunder from the teacher's Sinai. The stories were chosen first for entertainment. They make a spirited and broad-viewed collection. No other anthology ranges so widely—from the Detective Fiction Weekly to Harper's, from the Woman's Home Companion to Blast, a proletarian journal.

Mr. Uzzell's challenge makes it a ticklish business for anyone to report on the quality of the collection. I found the last story in the book, "Happy New Year," by Fred R. Miller, distinctly vivid and as simple as ABC—which ought to set me up for a week. But a story called "Censored," by Lowry Charles Wimberly, left me, in the middle of the book, with something perilously close to a headache and a yawn.

I can't read Mr. Cabell anyway.

In the Margin.

E. Arnot Robertson, author of "Four Frightened People," and "Ordinary Families," has just arrived in New York for an extended visit. She is the original of James McBey's Academy picture, "The Red-Haired Girl."

From Papeete, Tahiti, Simon & Schuster have received the following cryptic versification on the part of Hendrik Van Loon:

"The Pacific Ocean is very large.
I am working hard
New York is very large, too.
In New York I work very hard, too.
So, I might just as well have stayed
In New York."

Mr. Van Loon is en route on a world cruise on the S. S. Franconia.

Random House will commemorate the centenary of the birth of William Morris next month by publishing, in conjunction with the Nonesuch Press, of London, a volume of Morris' best known work. It will contain his full-length novel, "News From Nowhere," and three other prose romances, examples of his poetical romances, and a fine collection of his lectures and essays, which are as timely as though they were written for this morning's editorial pages.

G. D. H. Cole will be the editor of this new volume, which will be uniform with the Blake, Donne and Gilbert volumes already published under the Random House imprint.

Youth, Reputed Police Target, To Face Court

Joseph Diblasi Accused of Driving Through Fire Lines.

Joseph Diblasi, 29, reputed target of a policeman's bullet when he drove his machine through fire lines early Monday, will appear in Police Court this morning to answer reckless-driving charges.

Diblasi was arrested yesterday on a warrant sworn to by Policeman C. R. Burnett, of the First Precinct. He was booked for reckless driving and released in custody of his attorney.

Police charge Biblasi's machine sped through fire lines in the 900 block of Ninth street northwest, endangering the lives of firemen and spectators. Policeman Burnett fired at the car, it was alleged, after leaping several feet to escape being struck.

The policeman, meanwhile, faces Trial Board action on recommendation of his commanding officer, Capt. William E. Holmes. Burnett's use of his service revolver was investigated by police officials. The recommended Trial Board action was upheld by Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, department executive officer.

Merchants Plan Bloom Fete Aid

Booster Trip Scheduled Late in May.

Cooperation with the "cherry blossom festival" and the President's Cup Regatta was planned by the board of governors of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association yesterday. William E. Russell was appointed to represent the association on the regatta committee.

Dr. Malcolm G. Gibbs, chairman of the booster trip committee, announced plans are being made to hold the trip late in May.

The following new members were elected to membership: Smith's Transfer & Storage Co.; Lewis Edwin Ryan, Inc.; F & W Grand Store; Melvern Dairies, Inc.; the Heigh-Ho Club, and the Hamilton Hotel. R resolution was adopted expressing sympathy for members of the family of T. C. Dulin, who died recently. He had been a member of the association for many years.

U. S. Air Visitors Get Medals From Mussolini

Rome, March 28 (AP).—Premier Mussolini conferred gold medals today on the 28 aviators who took part in last year's mass flight to Chicago.

Medals also were presented to the families of the two fliers who were killed on the expedition, Lieut. Squaglia and Sergt. Quintavalle.

Chiang Kai-Shek Offer Held Presidential Move

Hongkong, March 28 (AP).—Chinese reports today said that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, war lord of the Nanking government, is offering Gen. Chan Chai-Tong, leader of the opposing Catnonese government, the national vice presidency.

Such an offer, if true, is taken to mean that Chiang Kai-Shek proposes to become president of the republic, filling the position which has been vacant since the death of Dr. Sun Yat Sen.

Head Stuck in Mud; That Saves Man's Life

Duncan, Okla. (U.P.).—D. E. Hearne had his neck stuck in the mud but the ignominious treatment probably saved his life.

Rains had softened the road along which he was driving a wagon and team. As he stopped and alighted, he caught his feet in the reins and fell. As he struck the ground, J. C. Wigham came along in an automobile and both front and rear wheels passed over Hearne's head, pressing it into the soft earth.

Sea Gulls Quit Work When They Can Steal

Boston (U.P.).—Sea gulls, hovering over Boston harbor, espied half a dozen seals romping in the waters below.

A seal would dive and come to the surface with a fish in its mouth. The gulls, watching hungrily, apparently decided it would be easier for them to let the seals do the fishing. So, when a seal appeared with fish in mouth, a gull would swoop down, snatch the fish and fly away.

This happened several times before the seals disappeared.

Arms Expert Also Is Writer Of Fairy Tales

Col. Frank J. Baum Calls West Coast Helpless in Case of War.

Los Angeles (AP).—He writes children's fairyland tales and is a military defense expert.

That's Frank J. Baum, veteran of four wars, commander now of an Army reserve regiment. When he is not sitting up after midnight with a pot of black coffee writing of Rosine and the Laughing Dragon he may be poring over maps showing what enemy invaders could do to the Pacific Coast.

"But I'm not at all a jingo as peaceful as the term," he declared today. "Nobody who has been in a war wants another one—and preparedness is good insurance against attack.

In a work "den" lined with books about the Land of Oz, Baum reeled off figure after figure about armament. He contended the West Coast would be practically defenseless if the United States Navy should be in the Atlantic.

Calls Guns Obsolete.

Many of the land guns, he said, are obsolete, some another one—and dating back to 1885. He declared there are not enough men in the U. S. Army Coast Corps to man one fort properly; that the entire Coast has only four modern anti-aircraft guns and that a hostile fleet could "park" in Santa Monica Bay and shell Los Angeles.

"The longest range guns at Fort MacArthur, San Pedro, for instance," said Baum, "are four 14-inch rifles. Theoretically, they shoot 28,000 yards, but actually about 18,000.

"An enemy fleet with its 16-inch, 38,000-yard range guns could pull up at Huntington Beach out of our range and destroy the oil fields there, at Signal Hill and even Santa Fe Springs and Brea, cutting off fuel sources of our Navy.

"Even if our fleet were in the West, it alone could not adequately defend 3,000 miles of coastline."

Cites Facts in Speeches.

These and other aspects of Western defense he has been outlining to clubs and meetings.

Baum is a lieutenant colonel in command of the Army Reserve 519th Coast Artillery, antiaircraft, in which there are 82 officers. He spent 18 months in France and served in the Philippine Insurrection, the Boxer Rebellion in China, and the Spanish-American War.

As a writer he is continuing the long series of children's stories started in 1899 by his father, L. Frank Baum, creator of "Oz," who died in 1919. Coming here from his native New York in that year, the younger Baum now lives in suburban Westwood.

Aged Professor Sticks to Horse

Refusal to Drive Car Due to "Insult" Fear.

Huntsville, Tex. (AP).—Despite his 75 years, Dean Joseph Lucien Pritchett, of Sam Houston State Teachers College here, continues to ride horseback between his home and the campus each day.

"Professor Joe," as the students affectionately call him, has no use for an automobile except when he wants "to get somewhere in a hurry." And even then he won't drive.

"I'd feel like I was insulting the horse," he says.

Since Dean Pritchett goes home for lunch, he makes the three-quarters of a mile ride between his residence and the college four times a day. He has been doing that for 46 years.

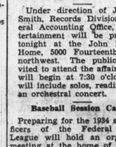
STANARDS of employment, including a seven-day week and long hours, under the District government are assailed by E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes.



BAKER.

He strikes at the 7-day week schedule of employes at the city jail, the 12-hour day at Gallinger Hospital for the nurses and attaches and working conditions at Division of Emergency Relief.

A very small sum, about $9,000, Mr. Babcock holds, would be sufficient to give the District Jail employes a day off a week.

"This," the labor leader declares, "would be in compliance with every rule of law, religion and social economy. The question of salary for workers in the Emergency Relief Division is very troublesome since several appropriations are involved, several different systems of payment are in effect, and several restrictive provisions of the law and of the Comptroller General's rulings have been put into effect.

"Employes at the Gallinger Municipal Hospital, at least many of them and perhaps employes in other parts of the service of the District, are required to work 12 hours a day. Those who take care of the sick people have a peculiarly nerve racking profession. Moreover, the profession of caring for the sick has, during the depression, become an exceedingly over-crowded one. Many persons who, in normal times, would call in nurses, are not now doing so. There is much unemployment in the nursing profession and it is not believed that those nurses and others who are employed by the District should still be retained on a 12-hour day."

Mr. Babcock is bringing this to the attention of Congress while the District appropriation bill is up for consideration.

Quiros Ready For Display Of Portrait

Senora Cardenas' Picture Finished by Artist From Argentine.

First Showing Arranged April 6 at Embassy Sherry Party.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Among the persons of extraordinary interest resident in the Capital recently is the famous Argentine artist, Senor Don Cesaro Bernaldo de Quiros, who came to Washington more than a year ago to do portraits of prominent men and women. He occupied a house on Sheridan Circle last winter.

After starting studies of several celebrated beauties, and completing portraits of a number of outstanding men, he went to New York to fill other engagements and has now returned to the Capital.

Senora de Cardenas, wife of the Ambassador of Spain, will entertain at a sherry party April 6 at which a finished portrait of her, painted by Senor de Quiros, will be shown for the first time.

A Portrait in Costume.

The painting, of unusual interest in coloring and inspiration, portrays Senora de Cardenas in her native Rumanian national costume with brightly colored tunic, fitted trousers, and saucy pointed cap. The coloring suits the soft golden color of her hair, and the costume lends life and character to the study.

Senor de Quiros' portraits excel in interpretation. Each painting is not only splendid in execution and likeness, but is arranged in a setting and pose most characteristic of the subject. Senor de Quiros is a young and gifted artistic personality.

In his famous "Gaucho" paintings for which he is best known, there is an outstanding return to the heroic, the dramatic painting of "La Grand Ligne," the last truly great representative of which was Eugene Delacroix.

Voyagers Leave Capital.

Senora de Cardenas accompanied her sister, Mme. Auff'm Ordt, to New York yesterday. Mme. Auff'm Ordt will sail on Saturday aboard the Rex to join her husband, Mr. Clement Auff'm Ordt, who sailed last month, at their home in Rumania. Mr. and Mme. Auff'm Ordt spent several weeks in Washington earlier in the season as the guests of the Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas.

The retiring Counselor of the Danish Legation and Mme. de Wichfeld also will sail on the Rex Saturday. They left Washington yesterday, accompanied by their children. Mr. de Wichfeld has been appointed Counselor of the Danish Legation in Rome. His successor, Mr. Hialmar Collin, arrived in New York yesterday aboard the Rex, coming from Rome, where he has been serving as Counselor of Legation. He will come to the Capital early next week to assume his new duties.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Whitla Stinson, who have been making their home at the Hay-Adams House, will leave Washington tomorrow for Warrenton, Va., where they have taken a house for the spring and early summer.

Mrs. William Galbraith Departs for Mount Lake.

Mrs. Galbraith, wife of Capt. William W. Galbraith, U. S. N., left Washington yesterday for Mount Lake, Fla., to join Capt. Galbraith, who has been there for the past two weeks. Mrs. Galbraith was accompanied by Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman. They will return to Washington about April 12.

Miss Louise Isabel Warfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Frederick Warfield, and Mr. Arthur Linwood Garrett, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Garrett, were married at 8 o'clock last evening at the Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church.

The church was decorated with a profusion of Eastern lilies, white roses and ivory spring blossoms. On either side of the alter, which was banked with dark palms and ferns, there were tall, lighted tapers in white candelabra. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. E. Hawthorne.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of ivory satin was made on very simple lines with a long court train. Rows of tiny buttons extended from the shoulders to the wrists on the dolman sleeves. The veil of filmy tulle was arranged in halo fashion, and the bride wore a shorter veil over her face. Their gowns of chiffon were styled like the gown of the matron of honor. The first two were costumed in pale green, and the others in peach chiffon. The hats of all four were trimmed with braids of green and peach maline.

All four of the attendants carried bouquets of talisman roses and rust-colored snapdragons tied with ribbons of the two colors.

China Figurines Are Renovated By Doll Doctor

She Can Make Dresden Porcelains Look as Good as New.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

With cold precision, a chuckle, or a hearty laugh, a Washington woman mends broken arms and legs, and renovates blotched and peeling faces.

Her's is a strange profession. She's a doctor of art. Rare porcelains, dainty little Dresden figures minus an arm, a leg, a head, or a frill of lace are her special studies. With an adeptness that's a take-off on the skill of modern surgery she can restore lost limbs in the bat of an eye. And the way she patches up china frilly frocks, and knee breeches puts the present day dressmaker to shame.

As for blotched and peeling faces, she has a photograph of one of her subjects which is truly an amazing "before and after."

The life-size portrait of a colonial dame was decidely the worst for wear. The paint across the face was cracked and hanging in strips. The high lace collar was almost faded out and hair line practically obliterated. But the doctor got busy matching paints and studying lines, and a short time saw the colonial lady looking pretty and pert as the day she was painted.

But all this mending is but part of this expert's work. She can take old canvases and patch them up, do wonders to old painted leather screens and stencil like a master. She restores ivory miniatures, makes French mats, paints old furniture and does passe partouting of pictures.

Fragrant and Utilitarian.

A dusting powder with the property of deodorizing has fast risen to the peak of bath powder fame.

For combined with the pleasure of stepping out from an exhilarating tub to the fragrance of a jasmine or June geranium powder shower, there's the assurance perspiration odors will be banished for the rest of the day.

Rejuvenate Broken-Down Furniture.

A forerunner of a spring clean-up should consist of a general patching up of furniture. It sounds horrible, but it can be turned into a lot of fun. With some of the plastic wood on sale in a local shop we can fill in cracks, piece together splits and disguise chips.

This wood comes in oak, mahogany, walnut and other colors. It can also be bought in natural, to be used in pieces we wish to paint over afterward.

One customer reported the ledge of her console table had been broken off and lost and she took a can of wood and successfully made a brand-new ledge.

Horsewomen, Take Notice.

It's a pleasure to look down from Million Dollar Bridge these days and see the riders galloping around the circle there, taking the jumps and trotting off through the bridle paths. It's a pleasure to the shops to see customers take an interest in riding habits. "And," said the proprietor of a Connecticut avenue shop, "it is with great pleasure that we present to the youthful riders some scarfs designed to add a particular chic to their costumes." "And," as one purchaser who returned for another said, "it's a real pleasure to wear such a soft, silky scarf, that looks good, feels good and is good!" It looks as if everybody's pleased.

The scarfs up for discussion are the finest, softest silk imaginable, with hand-blocked jockey prints on either end.

Glass for Everything.

Glass tops for dressing tables, desks and tables are a godsend to the hostess who wishes to protect her furniture, and a boon to the interior decorator, amateur or otherwise, who appreciates their smart finish.

A local shop makes a specialty of cutting and trimming glass to suit anything. Glass bookcases, glass draft-preventers for windows, glass anything, in fact.

They take orders, fill them promptly, and charge a conservative amount for material and service.

A Handy Combination.

Compacts which are more than compacts are those with space for cigarettes too. A downtown store has some of these, small enough to fit the smallest pocket, light enough not to burden our purses.

Book-shaped, they open to disclose a neatly finished interior with one side designed for the powder and rouge, the other for cigarettes. They're available in all colors with marquisite trim.

Bright Item for Spring.

Corded silk bags with linen linings for spring and summer are now basking in the fashion spotlight.

Some that arrived in Washington recently put rainbows to shame with their variety of colors, ranging from bright reds to baby blues. There are also black and whites, and brown and whites.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 105, for further information. Or write, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

Two Varieties of Sailors Will Walk Out on Easter

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, March 28.—Sailors with suits. That's a foregone Easter conclusion. For the sailor hat is a typical suit hat with crisp, clean-cut lines and an air of briskness. And this spring sailor hats are even smarter than they were last spring. So you can figure out how very much in fashion they are.

Two Nationalities.

There are two kinds, representing two nationalities. One is American to its very core . . . the classic straight brim type, either in the real old Gibson Girl shape almost like a man's boater straw, or in softened versions of this famous hat.

The other traces its ancestry to France . . . more particularly to the Breton sailor boys. This is the Breton sailor with brim rolled up from the face, one version of which is shown in the top sketch.

Of course there'll be other kinds of hats worn with suits on Easter. The tricorne, for one, as it has the clean-cut lines a suit-hat needs and it goes equally well with the very tailored suits or with the softer dressmaker types.

Also to wear with mannish tailored suits are two very mannish hats . . . the one with bowler roll brim, somewhat resembling a man's derby, and the hat with fedora crown which is the crown similar to that on a man's felt hat.

The hat with its left side brim turned sharply up to show the profile is another excellent one to wear with either tailored or soft suits. It is usually flattering to both youth and age.

If your suit is of the casual or swagger type in tweed, you'll want a more casual looking hat. One good one is sketched at the bottom of the illustration.

This has a medium width swagger brim and usually the crown is dented or tucked or folded. But close to the head, just the same.

(Copyright, 1934.)

Hats of the types described are available in Washington in all the better hat shops and department stores.

What Today Means to You

"Aries."

If March 29 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m.

The child born on March 29, as soon as it can understand, must learn not to harass dumb animals. Children are inclined to be thoughtless regarding the care of pets. No one has a right to own an animal unless willing to give the necessary time for its proper care, and this should be impressed on the young as soon as they are old enough to assume responsibility for its welfare.

If March 29 is your natal day, do not allow yourself to develop a jealous disposition. Avoid becoming cantankerous over little things, as there are too many important things requiring your attention. You fully appreciate your strong points as well as your weaknesses, so try to eliminate the latter and strengthen the former.

People born on March 29 must respect matrimonial obligations. A flagrant disregard of the sanctity of marriage will lead to complications in which no self-respecting man or woman would care to become involved. As a rule the married life of those born on this date is decidedly successful, as the contracting parties are influenced by love and not financial considerations.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Home Ground Flour.

A recent newspaper editorial told of a new invention for the household. It is a small, inexpensive machine to grind wheat and other grain, making fresh flour for breads and pastries and fresh cereals.

can be put in barrels and shipped long distances and kept for a long time under all sorts of conditions. The miller is not liable to be called on in 1936 by a consumer in India with a claim for damages due to musty flour. A miller now makes a good, safe product, puts it in a secure barrel and sends it forth—never expecting to hear from it afterward.

The disadvantage of the method is that the minerals and especially the lime and phosphorus and much of the vitamins, especially vitamin B complex, are removed.

Among the effects of deficiency in vitamin B complex are neuralgic pains, neuritis, constipation, lessened fecundity, less maternal milk, babies that do not thrive, increased infant mortality rate in the first six months of life. Beriberi and pellagra are more advanced conditions that are not ascribed to eating milled flours.

There are many methods of home grinding of wheat. It can be done with a coffee grinder, a method advocated by Dr. W. H. Wiley, or with a hammer mill. Doubtless the mill referred to in the editorial is an improvement over the older ones.

Cooking School Features Exotic Foreign Dishes

On Last Day Recipes for Russian, Swedish Foods Given.

In keeping with the idea of International Day the last session of the Congressional Cooking School featured famous dishes popular in nine foreign countries. All of these were prepared according to recipes in the new Congressional Cook Book.

One of the best of these was a Russian dish contributed by Princess Cantacuzene, granddaughter of President Grant. It follows:

Borsch.

2 lbs. rich soup meat
1¼ lbs. beets, cut in strips and soaked in vinegar
½ head fresh cabbage
Turnips, carrots, cut in pieces
1 cup tomato puree
3 strips bacon, diced
Vinegar, salt, pepper
1 bay leaf
Sour cream
2 qts. water

Make stock from meat cut in cubes. Cook vegetables together with seasonings, in small amount of stock with bacon. Strain stock. Add to vegetables with meat cubes. Add 2 tablespoons of sour cream with each bowl of soup.

Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Minister from Sweden, contributed the recipe to the cook book for:

Fattiga Riddare (Poor Cavaliers).

Slices of stale white bread
2 tablespoons cinnamon
3 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons flour
3 cups milk

Soak bread in a mixture of milk, sugar, flour and cinnamon. Fry in butter until light brown. Serve with jam or strawberry preserves.

One of the most interesting of all recipes followed at the cooking school was given by Mme. Matsudaira, wife of the former Ambassador from Japan, for:

Sukisaki.

1½ pounds flank steak and piece of suet
2 onions
½ pound mushrooms
½ pound steamed spinach
½ cup sugar
1 cup Japanese sauce
1 cup Japanese wine or 1 tablespoon sherry flavoring added to cup of cold water

Cut beef lengthwise in two pieces; slice pieces across as thin as possible. Peel and dice onions and mushooms. Melt suet in pan over high flame. Saute onions and mushrooms. Add wine. Turn to low flame, and add beef and spinach. Season with sugar and soy. Let simmer until cooked. Serve on rice. This dish may be prepared at the table on the electric grill or chafing dish.

Clubs Indorse Safety Bills

A resolution indorsing the principle of the safety responsibility bills now before Congress has been adopted by the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs.

These bills provide for financial responsibility of owners and operators of motor cars for damages caused by motor vehicles on the highways of the District. Safety responsibility bills have been enacted by 21 States of the United States and six provinces of Canada.

The federation also adopted a resolution commending the District Commissioners for not changing the District supervisor of playgrounds.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president, reported she had attended Congressional hearings on the NRA code to speak in behalf of equal pay for women for equal work, and also hearings on the food and drug bill and the Patman bill on Federal control.

The Dragon Murder Case

By S. S. Van Dine.

The Story Thus Far.

Philo Vance and District Attorney Markham, with Sergt. Heath, are investigating the strange disappearance of Sanford Montague in the old Dragon Pool on the Stamm estate. According to Leland, one of Stamm's guests, each member had sufficient motive for murdering Montague, with the exception of Bernice Stamm, to whom he was engaged. Stamm himself was helplessly intoxicated at the time of the tragedy and every one else was standing beside the pool. Stamm's mother, who is mentally unbalanced, insists that the "dragon" removed Montague because he was an "enemy of the family."

The following morning the pool is drained, but there is no sign of a body. Instead they see the imprint of a scaly hoof and a huge, three-taloned claw. A chance remark of Mrs. Stamm's leads Vance to an ancient glacial pot hole beyond the pool. In it lies the mutilated body of Montague.

We had stepped away from the wall of the pothole and turned back toward the parked car.

We entered the house by the front door and Heath strode immediately to the telephone.

Stamm had evidently heard us come in, for at this moment he came down the front stairs, accompanied by Dr. Holliday.

"I saw you driving down the East road a while ago," he said, when he had reached us. "Have you learned anything new?"

Vance was watching the man closely.

"Oh, yes," he replied. "We've unearthed the corpus delicti. But we wish the fact kept from the other members of the household for the time being."

"You mean—you found Montague's body?" the other stammered. (Even in the dim light of the hall I could see his face go pale.) "Where, in heaven's name, was it?"

"Down the road a bit," Vance returned in a casual voice, taking out a fresh Regie and busying himself with the lighting of it. "And not a pretty picture, either. The chap had an ugly wound on his head, and there were three long gashes down the front of his chest——"

"Three gashes?" Stamm turned vaguely, like a man with vertigo, and steadied himself against the newel post. "What kind of gashes? Tell me, man; Tell me what you mean!" he demanded in a thick voice.

"If I were superstitious," Vance replied, smoking placidly, "I'd say they might have been made by the talons of a dragon—same like those imprints we saw on the bottom of the pool."

Stamm was speechless for several moments.

"What damned poppycock is this?" he burst out in a half-frenzied tone.

Vance had seemed indifferent to Stamm's reaction, and he now turned to Dr. Holliday.

"I wonder if we might see Mrs. Stamm again for a few moments?" he asked.

The doctor hesitated; then he nodded slowly.

Mrs. Stamm was seated in the same chair in which she had received us earlier in the day, and though she appeared more composed than she had been on our previous visit, she nonetheless showed considerable surprise at seeing us. She looked up with slightly raised eyebrows and there was an ineluctable dignity in her mien. A subtle and powerful change had come over her.

"We wish to ask you, Mrs. Stamm," Vance began, "if, by any chance you heard an automobile on the East road last night, a little after 10."

She shook her head vaguely.

"No, I heard nothing. I didn't even hear my son's guests go down to the pool. I was dozing in my chair after dinner."

Woman Smiles Faintly.

The woman was silent, but I though I detected the suggestion of a faint smile on her old face.

Vance turned back from the window and stood before her.

"Mrs. Stamm," he said, with earnest significance, "we believe that we have discovered the place where the dragon hides his victims."

"Just as I told you, isn't it!" she exclaimed in a strained, high-pitched voice. "He was an enemy of our family—and the dragon killed him, and took him away and hid him!"

"But after all," Vance commented, "the dragon didn't do a very good job of hiding him. We found him, don't y' know."

"If you found him," the woman returned, "it was because the dragon intended you to find him."

"Might I ask, Mrs. Stamm"—Vance spoke with casual interest—"why it was that the dragon himself was not found in the pool when it was drained?"

"He flew away this morning at dawn," the woman said. "I saw him when he rose into the air, silhouetted against the first faint light in the eastern sky. He always leaves the pool after he has killed an enemy of the Stamms—he knows the pool will be drained."

"Is your dragon in the pool now?"

She shook her head knowingly.

"He comes back only at dusk when there are deep shadows over the land."

"When will he complete his work?" he asked.

"All in good time," she returned with a cold, cruel smirk; then added oracularly: "Perhaps tonight."

"Indeed! That's very interestin'." Vance did not take his eyes from her. "And, by the by, Mrs. Stamm," he went on, "in what way is the dragon concerned with the family vault across the pool yonder?"

"The dragon," the woman declared, "is the guardian of our dead as well as our living."

"Your son tells me that you have the key to the vault, and that no one else knows where it is."

She smiled cunningly.

"I have hidden it," she said, "so that no one can desecrate the bodies that lie entombed there."

Chapter XV.
Interrogation.

Markham evidently felt as I did, for the first question he put to Vance, when we were alone, was:

"What was the sense of bothering that poor deluded woman again? Her babbling about the dragon is certainly not going to help us."

"I'm not so sure, old dear." Vance sank into a chair, stretched his legs, and looked up to the ceiling. "I have a feelin' that she may hold the key to the mystery. She is a shrewd woman, despite her hallucinations about a dragon inhabiting the pool. She knows much more than she will tell. And, don't forget, her window overlooks the pool and the East road. She wasn't in the least upset when I told her we had found Montague in one of the potholes. And I received a distinct impression from her that, although she has built up a romantic illusion about the dragon, which has unquestionably unbalanced her mind, she is carrying the illusion much further than her own convictions—as if she wishes to emphasize the superstition of the dragon. It may be she is endeavorin', with some ulterior motive, to throw us off the track and, through a peculiar protective mechanism, to cover up a wholly rational fact upon which she thinks we may have stumbled."

Markham nodded thoughtfully.

"Why," he asked, frowning, "did you bring up the subject of the key to the vault?"

"I haven't the faintest notion," Vance admitted frankly, but there was a far-away, pensive look on his face.

Models Amused at Talk About 'Glamorous' Work

Say They Lead More Ordinary Lives Than Any Other Group of People; Regard Work as Pleasant But Not Particularly Exciting.

The young ladies who have jobs because they know the intricate and subtle tricks of "wearing clothes" have no illusions about their work, even though they are among the chosen few.

This is the second feature in a series of four on famous models and their jobs, appearing daily on The Post Woman's Page.

By Elenore Kellogg.

NEW YORK, March 28 (AP).—It gives the girls in Mme. X's select costuming establishment a good laugh when they read or hear about the "glamour" of being a model.

"That's so silly," said Dorothy Wood, of Brooklyn, who has been a model for seven years, but who thought at first she could never become accustomed to being on her feet all day.

"We're average girls and not fly-by-night-types," said Mrs. Edna Sullivan, a former photographer. "Lots of us live at home or are married. More of us marry ordinary men than any other group of people."

Not Such a Gay Life.

"Girls in offices have more chance," said Miss Wood.

"Or on the stage," put in Edith Leslie, also of Brooklyn, who escaped into modeling from stenography and is glad of it.

Nor are buyers the sort of people they once were popularly imagined, Mrs. Sullivan observed—men eager to escape from their everyday surroundings and ready for a tour of night clubs.

"They're getting away from all that now," she said. "The men who want to have a high time are in the minority. Models formerly were expected to go out with buyers, but now there are very few places where they do. Besides, so many of the buyers are women who have their own shops."

Madame X's girls are not paid so well as the advertisement girls, but their salaries and jobs are certain. Whereas one of the photograph models may earn $150 one week and nothing the next, the wholesale house and gown shop girls jog along on $25 to $50. But they get it every week. Their salary formerly was about $75.

They prefer a wholesale house to a shop because of the absence of "rich women."

"They're inconsiderate, treat us like dirt, come in at 5, just when we're ready to go home," was the composite complaint.

How They Happened In.

Miss Wood "just walked into a job" as a model because "all the girls down at school" were doing it. Mrs. Sullivan, in her photographic studio, discovered the "model size"—A 14—just fitted her. Miss Leslie "knew a girl who was a model."

There was no talk of portrait painting or piano playing in Mme. X's establishment. These were girls to whom their work was a good job, better paid and more congenial than most.

For openings and important shows the couturiers recruit models from the advertising field. These are lucrative assignments, $15 to $25 for a few hours' work.

Posing for fashion pictures also is a highly specialized business, the ability to appear as "if they belonged in the clothes" being most important.

Janet Hutchinson was described by one photographer as a girl who "can make smart clothes even smarter." She is a favorite for posing evening gowns and "sophisticated clothes."

If the advertiser wants a subject portraying the poise and suavity of the opera crowd he might choose Hester Jones, who frequently graces the "smart shop" advertisments.

Not one model in 50 is suitable for fashion work, photographers said.

Tomorrow—On the Artist's Dais.

Flower-Sending At Easter Time Is Ticklish Art

Corsages Must Harmonize With Personality and Clothes of Wearer.

Easter corsages should be not only things of beauty in themselves, they should express the personality and harmonize with the costume of the wearer.

Washington florists are more than glad to give helpful hints to bewildered men who want to do right by their girls in the way of Easter bouquets.

Nothing, they caution, more distracts a woman than to receive a corsage whose colors conflict with her costume. They advise all flower senders to find out the color of the dress to be adorned with flowers, and if that isn't possible, stick to white or ivory ribbons.

The kinds of flowers range all the way from the demure violet to the glamorous orchid—and it depends on the man to fit the flower to the girl.

Rosebuds, especially sweetheart roses, are grand for the young girl. They are lovely when combined with gardenias. Gardenias alone, adorned only with their natural foliage, are good. Sweet peas combined with freesia have a lighthearted air about them which makes them suitable for the young girl on a sunny Easter morning.

And for the mature woman—orchids, especially green orchids, are always lovely, and not so expensive this year as formerly. Yellow, pink, brown, and white are lovelier than the purple orchids, though probably because they are more costly.

For mother nothing is more perfect than a corsage of violets with one red rose, or a few sprigs of lily-of-the-valley. Iris and lily-of-the-valley are smart for the young woman who wears a tailored suit.

Potted plants come into their own at Easter time. Easter lilies, of course, predominate, but young rose bushes and hydrangeas are close runners up.

Cut flowers are a joy to the woman who is more interested in decorating her home than herself. And there is an infinite variety, baskets of spring flowers—pansies, daffodils, freesias, iris, tulips, lilies-of-the-valley—interspersed with maidenhair fern or pussy willow.

There are flowers for the well-dressed man on Easter morning too. An ox-blood carnation in his buttonhole is quite the thing. The Prince of Wales started the custom.

Speakers Ask Equal Rights For Women

New York, March 28 (Spl.).—Women should receive an equal opportunity with men to have both families and careers.

Both Magistrate Anna M. Kross and Dr. C. P. Obendorf, psychiatrist at Mount Sinai Hospital, made this statement to students of Barnard College at a symposium on "Women, Marriage and Careers."

Magistrate Kross held marriage should be only an "incident" in a woman's life, which temporarily checks, and then adds "incentive" to her career.

Mrs. Greta Palmer, journalist, stated very few women worked for pleasure. The majority of them were the bread earners of their families. Statistics showed unmarried working women were caring for more dependents than working bachelors, she said.

Dr. Obendorf, while agreeing with the two women on the subject of careers and marriage, pointed out the "instinctive feeling of protection" supplied by marriage often acted as a barrier to women's careers.

"The world of today needs the participation of women in its affairs," Magistrate Kross asserted, "and the solution of many problems rests with the young womanhood of the United States.

"During the last 20 years leadership among women has not been very apparent. The younger women seem to feel there isn't very much for them to fight for. But there is, and it is the opportunity of forming a definite concrete ideal of full and equal participation for women in the life of the world."

Women Write Best Sellers With Same Facility as Men

Although Women in Industry Faced Discrimination, Writers Never Have; Lecturer Discusses Popular Writing Through the Centuries.

READERS CONSTITUTE one class of people that never discriminate against women. Proof of this is attested by the fact that while women in industry have always had hard sledding, women writers have labored along with no interference, piling up enough sales to make any man sit up and take notice.

Almost as many women as men have turned out best sellers in the past, judging from the list of popular novels discussed last night by Dr. George F. Bowerman in his lecture on "Best Sellers Yesterday and Today," at the Public Health Service auditorium.

For instance, as far back as 1788, Fanny Burney's "Evelina" had achieved a wide reading public.

By the turn of the century, Maria Edgeworth's "Castle Rackrent" had also risen to the ranks of best sellers. Furthermore, it was a forerunner of the local-color novels, later to achieve wide popularity.

Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," published a few years later, was a "witty comedy of manners which in spite of its old-fashioned style, is still modern in spirit."

The pace of the historical novel was set by Jane Porter in "The Scottish Chief." But no fiction of the nineteenth century gained more attention than "Jane Eyre" by Charlotte Bronte.

The next woman to spring into the best-seller limelight was Harriet Beecher Stowe whose "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is widely read today.

Dr. Bowerman mentioned George Eliot's "Adam Bede" as being "remarkable for its characters of Ada, Seth, Dinah, and Hetty."

Novels That Have Lived.

At the time when senimental fiction such as Rhoda Broughton is "Not Wisely But Too Well" and Mrs. Henry Wood's "East Lynne" were popular, other women were writing novels that have lived. Louisa M. Alcott's "Little Women" and Helen Hunt Jackson's "Ramona" are still widely read, and modern lovers of mystery stories enjoy Anna Katherine Green's "The Leavenworth Case" as much as the latest number published by the Crime Club.

Other women writers (like many men writers) who had best sellers to their credit are now practically forgotten. In this class belongs Marie Corelli, author of "The Romance of Two Worlds," who achieved the distinction of being Queen Victoria's favorite writer; Mrs. Humphrey Ward, whose "Robert Elsmere" set forth freedom in religious thought, and Sarah Grand, whose "The Heavenly Twins" was a story of an advanced woman.

By the begininng of the twentieth century more women were turning out best sellers than ever. Among their novels mentioned and discussed by Dr. Bowerman were: Mary Johnston's "To Have and To Hold," Florence Barclay's "The Rosary," Gertrude Atherton's "Black Oxen," Margaret Deland's "The Iron Woman," Anne Douglas Sedgwick's "The Little French Girl," Ellen Glasgow's "The Deliverance," Willa Cather's "Death Comes For the Archbishop," and Edna Ferber's "Show Boat."

Other modern women writers discussed by Dr. Bowerman included Mary Roberts Rinehart, who he said was "credited with developing a new technique in the detective novel," Kathleen Norris, whose "Mother," first published in 1911, is still popular, and Pearl Buck, whose "The Good Earth" won the Pulitzer prize for 1931.

Brats.

By Katherine Smith.

Youngsters bawl and yell and grumble—
Put a brick beneath a hat.
Irritated adults fumble
For a word, and find—"The brat!"

Still I find that I may jumble
Sense into a nonsense that Makes me smile and feebly mumble
"Guess I'm just a bigger brat!"

Keeping Posted

Now for Bazaars.

SPRING IS HERE, though she wears a winter cloak. "How do I know?"—as the song goes? The answer is: Bazaars!

Come spring, schools, churches and many other organizations have bazaars. None is more popular in Washington than the Army Relief Bazaar.

It was Kipling who made the Colonel's Lady famous. In Washington the Army Relief Bazaar has made the generals' ladies famous.

• • • •

Just the other day Mrs. Lutz Wahl called her group of booth commanders together at St. Margaret's for initial laying of plans. Always these bazaars are colorful and filled with remarkable collections of varied articles, all donated for the sale, to help the needy families of some of Uncle Sam's soldiers.

• • • •

Other bazaars are colorful, too, but in one respect this military bazaar is really unique. None other has so magnificently immaculate a luncheon and tea booth.

This booth is usually the white elephant of bazaars and all too likely to assume the untidy air of a circus ground early in the afternoon. Not so with the food booth of the Army Relief Bazaar, for none other than Mrs. John F. Preston, wife of the popular inspector general of the United States Army, has charge of it.

• • • •

If ever there was anyone in Washington noted for this quality of immaculateness, it is Mrs. Preston. Old Dutch Cleanser is negligent in comparison.

Petite, with a mass of yellow silken curls bobbing above her blue eyes, Mrs. Preston is one of the most attractive and best-groomed women in the National Capital.

• • • •

Similarly, her large white house in Cortland place, is noted for its orderliness, as well as beauty of furnishings. Throughout the entire service, Mrs. Preston is distinguished as a genius in this quality, the very rarity of which has placed it second only to godliness. Mrs. Preston carries the faculty for commanding complete neatness and cleanliness, even into the difficult field of bazaardom.

• • • •

Happy are memories which the writer has of sitting down to her tables which formed a spotless oasis in the midst of milling, typical bazaar crowds and enjoying extra-delicious sandwiches, fragrant coffee (with plenty of cream) and pie of genuine culinary inspiration.

• • • •

Job For a Fiddler.

ANOTHER response to the column came via telephone yesterday when Mrs. Gerrit S. Miller, jr.—whose revival of square dances was noted here last week—said:

"Will you please help me find a good violinist who knows the business of calling off dances in the old-fashioned manner and can play the tunes they used in those days? I know a number of fine violinists but they don't know that kind of music."

• • • •

May 5 is the date when Mrs. Miller wants—not a violinist—but a good old-fashioned fiddler. On that Saturday night her square-dancing friends will give a big, end-of-the-season dancing party at a prominent country club close to the National Capital.

• • • •

It will probably be a benefit affair to help the Girl Scouts whose work Mrs. Miller enthusiastically promotes in what is best described as a heart-and-soul manner.

She's the Model Who Suggests Sophistication

The knack of wearing sophisticated attire in the manner born is possessed in a superlative degree by Miss Janet Hutchison, a model widely in demand by couturiers. She has been described by photographers as the girl who "can make smart clothes even smarter."

First Woman Head of Thermometry Section, Johanna Busse Is at Home in Laboratory

She Was an Iowa School Teacher When She Got Her Chance at Government Work During War Time; the Country Was Drained of Men Scientists and the Government Called Her to Washington.

Thousands of women seek Government positions. The positions seldom seek women. In a few instances, however, the Government has reached out into distant States for unusual women and asked them to come to Washington. This thrilling experience happened to an Iowa school teacher. Now she is the only woman section chief in an entire bureau.

This is the tenth in a series of articles telling of women who hold interesting positions with the Government.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

IN A SMALL cheerful office, filled with everything from window-sill geraniums to silhouettes of airplanes, sits Miss Johanna Busse, only woman who has ever been head of a section of the Bureau of Standards.

Every few minutes she sallies out of her small office into an adjoining laboratory where eight workers are testing thermometers and compiling data on the results of the tests.

Miss Busse is familiar with every lever, wheel, gadget and cylinder in the laboratory. She can describe with authority the good points—and the bad—of thermometers made in the United States, Germany and England. She talks as casually about thermocouples and resistance thermometers as most women do about rice pudding recipes and the latest style in sleeves. For three years before she became section chief in 1927, Johanna Busse worked in the laboratory.

Is Former School Teacher.

She entered Government work in 1918 at the electrical division of the Bureau of Standards. The war had drained the country of men scientists—most of them were in France—and women were stepping into the vacancies.

"Before the war about the only job open to a woman scientist was teaching school," explained Miss Busse yesterday at her homelike office in the west building of the Bureau of Standards. "I was teaching in Iowa when the Government offered me a place. I wasn't enthusiastic about teaching and yet I couldn't decide whether to come to Washington or not. My Iowa position was a sure thing. The Government job was pretty much of a gamble as the women chemists would probably be dismissed when the men came back from war."

But Washington was an alluring place. And teaching, while secure, didn't offer much room for advancement. Johanna Busse wired the Government she would come to the Capital providing she could give her school board a month's notice. The Government said she could. Before that month had passed the Armistice was signed.

"You can imagine how I felt," laughed Miss Busse. "I had resigned my teaching position. I wired Washington to see whether the Armistice had affected my new job with the Government. It hadn't. I was told to come ahead." She smiled as she recalled those hectic days.

Worked on Gun Gauges.

In the electrical division of the Bureau of Standards the former Iowa school teacher worked on gauges for measuring the pressure in explosion chambers of 14-inch guns.

"Of course I worked on many other things, but I remember those gauges best of all," said Miss Busse.

She remained in the electrical division until 1924 when she was transferred to the thermometry section. Soon after she was made chief of the section in 1927 she suddenly decided she wanted to learn to fly. She had never been inside an airplane until she took her first lesson. Now she owns one-third of an airplane and flies an average of 10 hours a month. Last year she entered the Annette Gipson air races at Floyd Bennett Field.

"I had a grand time even though I did come in last," laughed Johanna Busse. She would much rather race than fly in the ordinary manner; asserts that if she had the time and money she would enter the cross-country races. She also dreams of flying the Pacific. "But I can't afford that adventure. Even if I had the money to do it, how could I get away from this?" She motioned toward the laboratory with its complicated apparatus. Thermometers of all sizes and types were waiting to be dipped into hot baths of oil, water or tin.

"We test thermometers for anyone who brings them to us," stated Miss Busse. "The Government makes a small charge. Many manufacturers of thermometers have their products tested here.

We also test for other Government departments."

Women Chemists Have Difficulties.

About 129,000 thermometers go through the testing process in a year.

Johanna Busse admitted that most women chemists have an extremely difficult time finding employment outside the teaching profession.

"I supose I would still be teaching if the war hadn't come along," she said. "Few manufacturers will hire women chemists, even for minor positions. The Government employs only a few. So I guess it is a good thing most women prefer casseroles to test tubes."

Miss Busse, who was born on an Iowa farm "with a windmill on it," attended the State University of Iowa. While in college she suffered terrifying experiences—the writing of English themes.

"It was torture, downright torture, everytime I had to write one of those terrible things," declared Johanna Busse, who thinks nothing of climbing into her airplane and seeing how fast it will go. "I guess I was meant to spend my days in a laboratory. I feel at home there."

Read in tomorrow's Post of the first woman member of the United States parole board.

Woman Explorer and Author Says Savages Happiest People

BOREDOM, WORRY and frustrated lives are the coin with which men pay the price for progress and civilization. And Mrs. Mary Hastings Bradley, lion shooter and author, yesterday said her experience in the African jungles had caused her to think the price too great.

"When I come back from the jungles," she said when interviewed at the Mayflower, "I can not help but notice the unhappy faces of the people I meet in the street. You never meet worrid, unhappy savages. Life is simple for them, and I think they are healthier, both physically and mentally, than the civilized man. I am sure they are happier than we are."

Mrs. Bradley is one woman who is quite as much at home among the savages as in the civilized world.

She looks as if she belonged in a hothouse garden, or behind a softly-lit tea table. Yet she shoots lions and tigers, goes exploring in African jungles and thinks nothing of it.

"Courageous?" she said. "I have never thought of myself as being especially courageous. It doesn't take as much courage to shoot an elephant as it does to have a baby. It isn't any more difficult to face an unknown jungle trail, than a dreary day.

"But I must confess there have been times when shooting one elephant I have died a thousand deaths. I love exploring. I love the mystery, and the excitement. But often I have been so frightened my heart has jumped up in my throat.

"Sometimes I wonder at myself when I think of shooting crocodiles and elephants and hyenas. But when you go down in those jungles, and see whole villages destroyed by herds of elephants and buffalo, see people starving to death, for want of the food the death of those animals will give them, then you forget your qualms about killing wild things."

Together with her husband and small daughter, Alice, Mrs. Bradley has penetrated the most remote African jungles.

"My daughter has spent a large part of her time in Africa ever since she was 5 years old," Mrs. Bradley said, "and she loves it. I think the experience will enrich her whole life. She has seen life at it was when the human race was young, the world as it was at the beginning of time, and she has a store of beauty to last her all her life."

Quite as indispensable as her gun on her exploring trips is Mrs. Bradley's typewriter.

"The natives thought it was a musical instrument," she laughed, "and they thought it was the worst musical instrument they had ever heard. They used to gather around and laugh whenever I started to 'play.' Then they would bring their flutes and play, to show me what good music was like.

"I love adventuring," Mrs. Bradley concluded. "But I love home, too. It is like living in two worlds, I think. I have a contented foot and a wandering foot. Sometimes I stand on one and sometimes on the other. But no matter which one I stand on, life is full and wonderful. And I shall probably be the most reluctant ghost ever shoved across the Styx."

She Is at Home in the Jungle

Mrs. Mary Hastings Bradley, explorer and author, believes civilization causes worry and frustrated lives, and that savages are happier than civilized men. She also says it requires more courage to face a dreary day than a jungle trail.

Motion Picture February "Box-Office Champions" Do Credit to Public Acumen

Films Elected All Were Hits In Washington

No Ties Among 6 Choices; 2 Ardent Molnar Fans; Theater Gossip.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The six motion pictures denominated the "Box Office Champions for February" by the poll of the key cities of the Nation, conducted monthly by the Motion Picture Herald, foremost of the industry's trade journals, could not have fallen more completely in line with our own estimates had this column been designated to select them.

For the first time in many months, no two pictures are tied for any single rating. To be sure, we might not have listed them in precisely the order in which the actual box-office receipts declare they deserve to be ranked, but there is not in the list a single subject which seems to these attentive senses deserving of being cast into the outer darkness.

The Winners.

To get the nub of the matter, the six winners are as follows:

1. CAROLINA, Fox production, featuring Janet Gaynor and Lionel Barrymore.

2. QUEEN CHRISTINA, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature, starring Greta Garbo, with John Gilbert, Ian Keith, C. Aubrey Smith and Lewis S. Stone.

3. MOULIN ROUGE, United Artists musical, starring Constance Bennett, with Tullio Carminati and Franchot Tone.

4. IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT, Columbia's perennial, costarring Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert.

5. THE CAT AND THE FIDDLE, M-G-M production, costarring Ramon Novarro and Jeanette MacDonald.

6. FASHIONS OF 1934, First National novelty spectacle, starring William Powell, with Bette Davis, Frank McHugh and Verce Teasdale.

Where We Differ.

Here are six very elegant entertainments, all of which have been seen in the Capital—or are being seen here now—and all of which, I dare say, showed a profit at the wicket.

Personally, we should never have rated "Carolina" over "Queen Christina," nor "Moulin Rouge" over "Fashions of 1934," but it evidently will have to be conceded that there are times when money not only talks, but talks louder than dramatic editors—which hardly seems necessary!

It is the firm conviction of this column that J. J Shubert, personally in-our-midsting a few days to keep a proud eye on goings-on at the National, is too good and too experienced a showman really to have believed, down in his heart, that the "Bitter Sweet" he sent us a few months back was a 100 per cent better production than the original of the Noel Coward operetta.

After an enthusiastic first-night view of "Annina," the National's current attraction—and our enthusiasm has not waned one iota since Monday night—we are convinced that this is the show Mr. Shubert thought "Bitter Sweet" was!

"Two Hearts That Beat, &c."

Of the many persons interested in the success of the impending world premiere of the motion picture production of "No Greater Glory," scheduled for Saturday at the Metropolitan, none, not even the producers, that high-strung Southern gentleman, Mr. Sam Galanty, Washington branch manager for Columbia Pictures, or Ben H. Atwell, c. luxe publicist lending his ample talents to the celebration of the event, exhibits the same degree of anxiety as characterizes the present demeanor of two well-known Washington figures. Slightly puffy figures, to be sure, but well-known Washington, nevertheless.

The picture, as everyone ought to begin to suspect by now, is a transcription of a book by Ferenc Molnar, which in the course of translation from the Hungarian, and adaptation to the screen, managed to lose its identity as "The Paul Street Boys," although its content is said to remain intact in every particular.

Autographed Copy.

At least one autographed copy of the work is owned in Washington, the property of old Capt. Francois Philipe Morse, who pompously strides the bridge of the S. S. Frantic, and formerly was the lowly occupant of this desk, while I sat at that one over there.

Old Capt. Frank received his copy from the hand of its author in the latter's home in Budapest, when he was on a junket there with Gilbert Miller some years ago when the junior Miller was on the verge of producing a Molnar play in London and New York.

Capt. Morse, as you may readily surmise, is a great admirer of the thoroughly cosmopolitan literary genius, who, like himself, earned his spurs in newspaper work and who, also, is quite as well known on the boulevards of Paris, or on Broadway, as in the city where he has lived so many years. It is not, however, of record that Herr Molnar ever sank so low as to go into the money racket!

Another Booster.

Another pseudo-Washingtonian who regards everything emanating from Molnar's pen as something personally near and dear, is Petty Officer Charlie McClintock, high commander of the galley on Old Capt. Morse's S. S. Frantic, where he concocts weird reasons for the existence of dyspepsia tablets.

In the course of the fleeting years, Boatswain McClintock, who, himself, like Mr. Atwell, is by way of being an exploiteer of parts, has served as avant courier for every Molnar play produced in this country with the single exception of "The Devil." But "The Devil," Boatswain McClintock playfully contends, was so long ago that he can't be expected to remember it—which is just a lot of the old malarkey!

Dishing the Dirt!

He just didn't happen to handle that one—or those two, for George Arliss and the late Edwin Stevens were both in productions of "The Devil," due to some defect in the copywright laws.

Notwithstanding all that, Charlie, too, regards Molnar as practically the last word in good fellowship and keen discernment, as well, of course, as good writing.

History, by the way, seems to be repeating itself. As I have said, Frank Morse met Ference Molnar with Gilbert Miller when Miller was in quest of one of Molnar's plays. Both he and the Theater Guild are said to be at present in a lively tilt to see which will secure the rights to still another of the prolific Hungarian's output.

Pirates and buccaneers will tread the boards at Roosevelt Auditorium on Friday and Saturday of Easter Week, April 6 and 7, when the Washington Community Players, directed by Bess Davis Schreiner, will appear in a stage version of Robert Louis Stevenson's world famous classic of "Treasure Island."

The cast will be composed of Maud Howell Smith, Thomas Matthew Cahill, my former office mate and one of the remaining few since Booth; Maurice Jarvis, Robert Halsted, John Sikken, Kent Dyer, Arthur Bradley White, H. R. Baukhage, Howard Whitfield, George Farrington, Donald Moriarty, Eldred Wilson, Jesse Veitch, Eugene Stevens, Barry Simpson, Andrew Dent, Wade Robinson, Walter Bucher, J. T. Radcliffe, W. L. Prothero and others.

Music and Eggs!

For the third time in as many years, the Loew Theaters Cadet Band has been signally honored with an invitation to participate in the annual Easter egg-rolling ceremonies at the White House.

For this year's event, Capt. John McKenzie, organizer and director, will marshal the members of the Baltimore, Richmond and Washington bands into a single unit that will include more than 200 juvenile musicians.

The only other musical organization that takes part in this Nationally-known Easter observance is the United States Marine Band, the President's own.

With all of this band personnel on the White House lawns, where is there going to be any space in which to roll an egg?

The Tuesday, April 3, performance of Dennis King in "Richard of Bordeaux," at the National, will be a benefit for the Washington season of the Children's Theater of New York. This announcement is made by the Women's International League, sponsors of the list of children's plays which will close their second season in the National Capital on April 28, with Ruskin's "King of the Golden River."

Signs, Omens and Portents!

Reverting briefly to Mme. Jeritza in Rudolf Friml's "Annina," at the National, it has been so long since Washington has seen so magnificent an operetta that its coming to town caused the first thunder and lightning of the season last night!

I mean, that's putting on a show!

Up From Florida Just in Time for "Spring!"

Hastening northward to be sure to arrive in Washington for the first touch of spring, Ruth Abbott, charming young New York actress, last seen here in "The Middle Watch," came into town simultaneously with the snowstorm that cluttered up last week-end. She found diversion, however, in providing peanuts for the sustenance of the pigeons in Lafayette Park. The pigeons evidently know a friend when they see one.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower" to Be Made Again; Leslie Howard "Outwits" the Radio; Pageantry on the Boulevard.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, March 27. — "When Knighthood Was in Flower" looms as a production for the screen again. This novel, by Edwin Caskoden, one of the most famous of its time, is a possession of M. G. M., and was made once previously. It was quite a successful production of its time, but fully ten years have elapsed since then. If it is filmed, I hear, there is a very large chance of the madcap heroine being protrayed by Jean Harlow. It would be her first entry into the costume domain. Every character that she has played so far has been very up-to-date.

DONALD COOK.

At present Miss Harlow is to embark on a story of today, written by Anita Loos, called "One Hundred Per Cent Pure." This will begin shooting Tuesday. The film marks her return to work at M. G. M.

Cast Alterations.

"Cleopatra" is into production with a more-or-less brand-new assortment of players. That is, with several substitutions made in the cast, with Ian MacLaren, the Shakespearean actor, doing Cassius, instead of Charles Middleton, and Arthur Hohl, as Brutus, instead of Clay Clement. Charles Morris has been assigned to Cicero, and Harry Beresford is the Soothsayer.

Indications are that "Cleopatra" will broadly paraphrase Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" and "Antony and Cleopatra," as well as incorporate sundry events of history not recorded in either one. It promises in nearly all respects to be Cecil B. DeMille's biggest production in a long time.

New Contract For Keaton.

Buster Keaton's first picture for Educational, "The Gold Ghost," scored such a big hit, and was received with such acclaim throughout the country, the studio has taken up the option for further pictures, for the "frozen-faced comic."

Ernest Pagano and Ewart Adamason are now preparing a story for the next Keaton picture, which is slated for early production.

New Arrivals Sign In.

Three pictures will finish at Columbia this week. "Twentieth Century," the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur stage play, which has been in work for the past month with John Barrymore and Carole Lombard in the stellar and leading roles, will finish Saturday. "Party's Over," with Stuart Erwin and Ann Sothern featured, and "Most Percious Thing in Life," with Donald Cook, Jean Arthur and Dick Cromwell, are also scheduled to finish on the same day.

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

Banking is the family profession of Donald Cook. One brother, Mortimer, follows the dollar in Portland, Oreg., while another, Ransom, runs a bank in Santa Rosa, Calif.

Walter Connolly is a graduate of the University of Dublin.

Ellisa Landi lives next door to Will Rogers in Pacific Palissades.

Grace Moore was once a Sunday school teacher.

The same chap who wrote "Viva Villa" is going to arrange the adaptation of the "Life of Joaquin Murrietta" for Francis Lederer. Murrietta was an early California outlaw.

Fredric March has been definitely chosen for the lead in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." Marion Clayton is to appear in this production, too. She has become quite well known for her stage performances in Hollywood.

Paul Hurst and Eric Wilton have been added to the cast of "The Old Doll's House."

Patricia Ellis is today greeting her uncle, "Dick" Calkins, popular newspaper cartoonist of Chicago.

By Grace Kingsley.

Hollywood, March 27.—Leslie Howard was chuckling to himself after completing an international broadcast from Hollywood to London yesterday, thinking he had put one over on the radio officials. They had warned him that it wasn't permissible to send personal greetings via the radio to anyone in England.

RAMON NOVARRO.

But when the radio star stepped up to the microphone, he said: "Hello, home. I would love to send a greeting tonight to my two children, Ronald and Leslie Ruth, who should be sleeping peacefully in my old house in the Surry Hills outside of London. I would love to say 'good night' to them, but they won't let me say it."

And so Leslie chuckled. After all, he had sent a message to those children.

But he had hardly been at work half an hour before a telephone message came to the set. It was from London. Yes, it was the Howard youngsters, and they had been listening in to the broadcast.

"You can't tempt us to come back to Hollywood," they said. "Our house and donkey and the stream back of the house are good enough for us. But we do love you. And don't worry about sending our allowance this month. We've reversed the charges on this call to you, and you can take it out."

"What was their allowance?" Reginald Owen asked Howard.

"Ten dollars a month," Howard answered.

And that's where the joke comes in. The toll charges were $67.

Eddie Lowe's Romance.

While Hollywood mourns the passing of Lilyan Tashman, we recall the story Eddie told us about his first glimpse of his wife.

"She was playing in the 'Follies,' and I literally fell in love with her at first sight," he said. "I asked the man with me to get me an introduction, and he did. I had had a lot of bad luck at that time, but Lil was a pal."

And Eddie and Lil were pals to the last.

Heard on the Boulevard.

Myrna Loy meeting with Ramon Novarro at the station on his return from New York, and dining with him and a few friends at his house . . . Slim Summerville visiting the Cafe de Paree, accompanied by his nurse, following his serious illness . . . James Cagney writing a book about Hollywood . . . But no scandal . . . Roberta Gale spending Sunday with her mother, just back from Florida, and introducing her to the current heart, Sam Zagon . . . June Brewster says that some of these movie actresses who go around boasting how they steal every scene they appear in should be arrested for petit larceny . . . Lois January and Glen Boles are valentining . . . Nancy Carrol welcoming her dad to Hollywood, and showing him the sights.

Reginald Denny tells about the man who thought Emily Post was a branch of the American Legion.

Jimmy Durante all up in the air because somebody stated that Jimmy's birthday was on March 18, when it is really March 10. "Why, I'm born under the sign of Aquarius, which guarantees that I will be among the brainy men. This other birthday is something else which guarantees me, under the rules of horoscope, only trouble in the knees," said Jimmy. . . . Ida Lupino never carries a cent of money with her. Reason? She can't resist buying sweets. . . . Gloria Shea, supposed to be Bernie Toplitsky's best girl, dancing and dining Winslow B. Felix and Don Alvarado. . . . A new foursome making the rounds of late is composed of Johnny Weismuller and Lupe Valez, and Bruce Cabot and Adrienne Ames.

18th Man Victim Of Lynchburg Fire

Transient Bureau Will Give No More Aid Just Now.

Lynchburg, Va., March 28 (AP).—Because of crowded conditions at the city armory, where survivors of Saturday's fire disaster are receiving temporary shelter, the Lynchburg Transient Bureau will take in no more wanderers for the present except in "unusual" cases.

Meanwhile, as a search went on for permanent quarters, the fire death list grew to 18. George Green, a 52-year-old Negro, home unknown, succumbed to burns at the hospital.

Three other men are in a critical condition.

Plenty of Luck—But It's All Bad

Weirton, W. Va., March 28 (Spl.).—Karol Sobel, local confectionery, says most people who think they are in hard luck should consider the question further.

Hard pressed by creditors, Sobel did some pressing himself and collected $700. Thieves stole it. A few days later fire destroyed his stock and store equipment. Now Sobel is starting all over again.

Miss Harvey was appointed when the idea of having a woman officer was considered a radical departure in police affairs. She served until 1930, when she was retired.

Her first work was dealing with women involved in criminal acts, but she was also a leader in arresting "mashers" on Baltimore streets. She had a wide knowledge of social affairs and toward the close of her police service she aided hundreds of girls.

197-Year-Old Clock Once Used by Polk

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 28 (Spl.).—A grandfather's clock 197 years old, said to have furnished the time for the occupants of the White House when James K. Polk was President in 1845-49, has been brought into notice by a recent report of another old clock found in West Virginia.

This clock, now in the possession of Allen N. Rumble, of Sycamore Creek, was given him by Miss Rose Watson, of Fairmont, whose brother, Lee Watson, purchased it in 1897 in Washington from descendants of President Polk. The clock stands 8 feet, 2 inches high. According to Rumble, it keeps perfect time. It was made in Germany.

Radio Waves and Ripples

IF it's all right for Cousin John to turn all the power he can into the True Story programs so not to miss a single word, it's all right, too, for Uncle Lemuel to click his new teeth, for Aunt Sadie to slap her cards during an unusually exciting moment at hearts, and for us to laugh in a manner to our friends hearty, to unsympathetic acquaintances equine. At least, that's our view of last Sunday's unpleasantness.

There we were having the jolliest kind of a time, Aunt Sadie whacking each play, Uncle Lemuel's teeth going like a typewriter, we laughing heartily and Cousin Archie snatching cards from the table and floor and stuffing them down the dining room heat register. Then came the True Story Hour and Cousin John from the movies. Aunt Sadie stopped her whacking. Uncle Lemuel his clicking and Cousin Archie meekly returned his cards. We were all a trifle self-conscious. But not for long. Another of Uncle Lemuel's planters' punches and we were having fun again.

We laughed and clicked and whacked, louder than before. Louder came the True Story Hour.

JOHN protested feebly. "Do you mind," he began. We scarcely heard him. Louder came the True Story Hour. We didn't mind at all. John drew his chair close to the radio, pressed a finger to his windward ear. He protested again, and again, progressively more firmly, more determinedly. He leaped to his feet.

"Shut up," he shouted, "or move out into the other room. I want to hear this."

We were aghast, hurt. Cousin John, of all people, speaking to us, to any one, like that. Aunt Sadie later said it had been on the tip of her tongue to tell him it was her radio he was listening to and if he didn't like what we did to go out and buy one of his own. For our part, we thought the story of our college classmate who had gone stark, raving mad concocting and writing true stories would be pretty effective.

But we didn't, and Aunt Sadie kept her peace, too, though you'd never get either of us to admit the things Mr. Froehlick next door said over the phone just then about calling the police, etc., had anything to do with our restraint.

A RADIO career once cut short by oil code authorities will be launched once more by the Nation's No. 1 ball player next month when Babe Ruth begins a series of three-time-a-week broadcasts for a breakfast cereal company.

The Babe will come to the microphone in person this time, rather than by electrical transcription, telling the story of the American League pennant race from the Yankee's first game with Philadelphia to the season's end. A part of his 15-minute broadcasts will be given over to dramatization of incidents from his life.

For an hour tonight N. B. C. will stage a celebration of the 80th anniversary of the signing of a treaty between Japan and the United States. The first half of the program from 6:15 to 6:45 will be carried on WMAL and will come from Japan, bringing addresses by Viscount Kikurjio Ishii, former Ambassador to the United States, and Joseph Clark Grew, U. S. Ambassador to Tokyo.

Greetings to Japan from Ambassador Hiroshi Saito and Roland Sletor Morris will radiate locally from WRC beginning at 6:45.

The show N. B. C. bosses here had a few frantic moments yesterday wondering what to do with Radio Joe's program, which comes at 6:30 on WRC. Joe finally agreed to move his broadcast ahead to 6:15.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Blackie Bear Leaves the Circus

THAT night on the circus train wasn't a very good night for Blackie Bear. He had all sorts of bad dreams about what the circus folks were going to do to him the next day. Next morning when he woke up the train was pulling into town where they were going to have the show that day. The engineer shifted the cars about, and ran them first on one track and then on another, backward and forward, bumpety-bump, and shook Blackie up so badly that he couldn't stand up in his cage.

After a while they hitched his car to a switch engine and ran it on a side track out to the circus ground. Then the engine went back and got another lot of cars, and one of them was a kitchen car where the circus folks cook their dinner, and another one was the animals' kitchen car, where they had all sorts of things to feed to the camels and bears and monkeys and other animals.

Then Jay Bird said "Ready!" and he raised the hook, and out jumped Blackie and ran for the woods.

Blackie Eats the Pig.

Blackie was awfully hungry, but when a big man with a cap and coat made of bear skins came and threw half a pig in his cage, for his breakfast, he was so scared he couldn't eat for a long time, for he felt just like that man was going to come back and take his skin off to make another bear coat with. He just couldn't bear to think of a bad circus man wearing his skin around as an overcoat. But after a long time, when the man didn't come back, Blackie quit feeling so scared, and he was so hungry that he thought he had better eat the pig.

As soon as all the circus folks got their breakfast, they went to work to put up the big tent, and then, away along about dinner time they started off uptown in a parade like they had done the day before.

Blackie sat up in his cage, and watched them all go by—the big wagon with a lion on it, and pulled by six big white horses driven by a woman in a red dress with gold braid all over it; another big wagon with a glass cage that had two or three of the biggest snakes Blackie had ever seen; a big band wagon with about two dozen men blowing all sorts of horns and beating big drums and little drums; a lot of elephants, with their big ears flopping as they walked, like big leaves that the wind blows; and then came that same lot of white bears that he had seen the day before, and that had been the cause of all of his present troubles.

How Blackie did wish that he had believed Jay Bird when he told him he had seen white bears! But it was too late to be wishing now; he ought to have known better at first. But here came a lot of black bears that looked just like Blackie, and all of them had rings in their noses, and were hitched to long chains that the men held in their hands.

The sight of these bears being driven that way by men with sharp sticks made Blackie mighty mad, and he made up his mind right there that he was going to break loose from the circus somehow or other before they got a ring in his nose.

After everybody had gone on the parade except a few men that were left to look after the tent and other things, one of the men came and unlocked Blackie's door and put a bucket of water in the cage. When he shut the door he didn't put the lock on, but he just hooked the door on the outside, as he knew Blackie couldn't reach out to unhook it.

If Blackie's foot had been about as big as Dr. Coon's he could have reached out and opened the door; but his foot was too big to go through the crack. Blackie walked round and round in his cage, and tried to think how he could break out, but he couldn't see any way to do it.

Jay Bird Visits Blackie.

After a while Blackie got so tired of walking that he lay down and went to sleep. He didn't know how long he had been asleep, but when he woke he heard somebody calling: "Blackie, Blackie, Blackie!" He opened his eyes and saw Jay Bird fluttering over his cage.

Blackie had never in his life been so glad to see anybody as he was to see Jay Bird, and he began begging him to do something to get him out of this cage. The circus train was right close to the woods and Blackie knew that if he could ever get out of his cage he could get to the woods before anybody could catch him.

Jay Bird flew around to the cage door, and when he found that there wasn't anything holding it but a hook on the outside, he told Blackie to get ready to run his very best, and he would open the door. So Blackie got right up to the door and put his nose against it so he could push it open when the hook was moved. Then Jay Bird said: "Ready!" and he raised the hook, and out jumped Blackie and ran for the woods.

There weren't many people around the circus grounds, and so nobody saw him, and he was soon in the woods and running for dear life toward home.

Establishing a Suit at a Trump Declaration.

The most frequently used principle in playing the hand at a trump declaration is the establishment of a side suit so that the established cards in that suit may be used for discards.

South, Dealer. Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ 4 2 ♡ K 10 8 ◇ 8 6 ♣ A K Q 6 4 2
♠ K J 6 5 ♡ 5 4 3 ◇ K J 5 3 ♣ J 5	N W E S	♠ 9 8 7 ♡ 6 ◇ 9 7 4 2 ♣ 10 9 8 7 3
	♠ A Q 10 3 ♡ A Q J 9 7 2 ◇ A Q 10 ♣ —

South is playing a contract of six hearts. West's Opening lead is a trump, and South proceeds to count his losers. There are three in spades, none in hearts, two in the diamond suit and none in clubs, a total of five. South can afford to lose only one trick if he is to fulfill his contract. Four losers must therefore be eliminated.

The Dummy hand contains six clubs to the A K Q; seven clubs are in the hands of the adversaries. If they are distributed four in one hand and three in the other, everything is simple; two small clubs, in addition to the three top cards, can be established by ruffing out one of the small clubs. But if the clubs are unfortunately distributed five and two, then the hand must be handled more carefully. It is best always to play the hand with the utmost safety.

Assuming the most unfortunate distribution, the Declarer must look for the entries to enable him to establish the club suit. In the Dummy hand there are the King, Ten and Eight of trumps. Since the Declarer holds the remaining top cards to the Ace of trumps, Dummy's trumps are all entries. Dummy will require three entries in order for Declarer to be able to enter the Dummy hand twice to ruff out two rounds of clubs, and a third time to bring in the remaining clubs.

Declarer captures the first trick with Dummy's heart 8 and plays the heart 2 from his own hand. He next leads the club 2, which he ruffs with the heart Knave in his own hand. He next leads the heart 7 from his own hand and takes with Dummy's heart Ten. The club 4 is next led and ruffed with the heart Queen. Both adversaries have followed suit on the two rounds of clubs, which means that six clubs have been played. Four clubs remain in Dummy's hand, making ten, so Declarer knows there are only three clubs in the hands of the adversaries, which will fall on the successive leads of the club Ace, King and Queen.

Declarer now leads the heart 9, and takes with Dummy's King, drawing the remaining adverse trump and entering Dummy at the same time. With the three successive leads of the club Ace, King and Queen, Declarer drops the outstanding clubs and on these leads he discards three losers from his own hand. The club 6 is established, giving Declarer a discard of a fourth loser. For the last lead from Dummy's hand Declarer selects either a spade or a diamond, according to which of the two Queens he has saved, and finesses for an extra trick. As the cards lie, neither finesse can succeed, but if the King lay with East the extra trick could be made by this method of play.

Tomorrow's Hand.

West, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ A J 8 4 3 2 ♡ K 10 9 ◇ 9 7 2 ♣ 8
♠ K 9 ♡ Q 8 5 2 ◇ A Q ♣ Q J 7 4 2	N W E S	♠ 6 5 ♡ A J 3 ◇ K 10 5 ♣ A K 9 6 3
	♠ Q 10 7 ♡ 7 6 4 ◇ J 8 6 4 3 ♣ 10 5

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Ban on Wine Near Church Draws Attack

Woman on Liquor Board Assails Refusal of License.

Applicant's Record Held Beyond Reproach, but Protests Prevail.

A vigorous dissenting opinion was given yesterday by Mrs. W. Beverley Mason, of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, as the other members refused to grant a beer and wine sale license to Early B. Rector, at 5441 Conduit road northwest, because his establishment is near a church.

Objections to the application were made by the Washington Federation of Churches, the Conduit Road Citizens Association and M. H. Hess, superintendent of the Sunday school of the Potomac Heights Cnurch, which adjoins Rector's place. All of the protests were based on the proximity of the store to the church.

Rector asked for a license to sell light wines and beers in bottles. He had conducted his business at the same site for 10 years.

Opinion of Pastor.

"I am far from satisfied, Mrs. Mason said, "that the wishes of the neighborhood would preclude the issuance of the license. It should be remembered with respect to the church, that the pastor appeared before us and, without further authority, presented his views. It is not the organized opinion of the church, but was an expression only of his personal views.

"With respect to the wishes of the neighborhood, the petition presented by the applicant contained a great many more signatures than that presented by the objectors. I do not think we have the discretion to refuse this license. Nothing unusual concerning the church was shown which would take it out of the ordinary run of cases. It must be remembered, she said, tha the theory of the law was to promote the use of light wines and beers as distinguished from other liquor and the neighborhood is entitled to have beverages of this kind available.

"The character of the applicant is beyond reproach," the majority opinion read, "but the evidence showed that the community is opposed to issuance of a license next to the church, and in this case the church should receive the protec-

Revenue Stamps Proposed.

A draft of proposed amendments to the liquor law, which would require the use of stamps for revenue collection instead of the present system of reporting by memoranda, was taken to the House District Committee yesterday by Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman and Assistant Corporation Counsel Andrew M. Howsley. It is proposed that wholesalers buy revenue stamps from the District, instead of paying revenue taxes based on monthly audits of hteir sales.

Chairman Offutt yesterday asked for 22 new inspectors for the board, characterizing the present force of eight as "totally inadequate." Originally it was proposed to have 20 inspectors, but the Budget Bureau cut the staff to eight. Chief Liquor Inspector Jerome Johnstone urged that the salaries of inspectors be increased "to remove them from temptation." On recent visits to establishments, he said, something of "value" was invariably offered to him. He interpreted this not as an attempt to bribe him, but as an attempt of dealers to become friendly with inspectors.

Danville, Va., March 28 (Spl.).—Addressing a large conregation at Main Street Southern Methodist yesterday, Bishop E. D. Mouzon said the country needs moral recovery more than material recovery.

F. C. Torrey, Master at Landon School, Posed at Age of 6.

Work Will Be Placed on Display There on April 15.

An almost unknown work of Augustus Saint-Gaudens, the famous sculptor, has come to light in Washington. By a strange coincidence, the statue considered his finest and probbaly best known is located in the Capital.

The one is a bust of Frederic C. Torrey, a master at the Landon School here, at the age of 6; the other is the Adams memorial, popularly known as "Grief," which is in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Paul L. Banfield, headmaster of Landon School, announced yesterday that the Torrey bust will be placed on exhibition at the school April 15 for the first time since it was cmpleted by the French-Irish artist in Rome 60 years ago. Unknown even to many connoisseurs and followers f Saint-Gaudens, the marble bust is believed to be first ever executed by him in stone.

"Freddie" Trrey was 5 years old when his parents took him and his sister, Mary, to Rome in 1873. Soon afterwards his father cmmissioned Randolph Rogers to make a bust f Mary. The boy was next to be preserved in sculpture but this time the elder Torrey chose the 25-year-old Saint-Gaudens, an obscure cameo cutter who had gone to Italy to study.

Recalls Sittings.

At that time St. Gaudens' only known sculpture was a bronze bust of his father, made on the eve of his departure from America in 1868.

Torrey dimly recalls sitting for the young sculptor, who was thrilled by his first real commission. He also remembers having photographs made of hismself, which St. Gaudens used as a guide in his task.

The bust shows a curly haired child whose face has a rather serious expression. Pupils of the eyes are recessed, a feature of the sculptor's technique which he retained throughout his career. "Freddie" is carved at the base, and on the side, below the left shoulder, are the words: "Aug. St. Gaudens, 1874."

Torrey, the father, was more satisfied with this simply conceived bust than he was with the "Mary" of Randolph Rogers, which he thought was too fancy.

"Too muc gingerbread," as Torrey kuotes his parent.

Evarts Not First Subject.

Public disclosure of the existence of the bust, whose authenticity is unquestioned, not only disproves the generally accepted belief that William M. Evarts, American statesman, was the first to sit for a stone bust by Saint-Gaudens, but indicates the sculptor remained abroad until 1874.

Encyclopedias are at variance on this latter point, some stating he returned to America in 1873 and others giving 1872. There is no question, however, that he did the Evarts bust very soon after coming back to the United States. It is also certain that he made only one trip to Europe in the early years of his career.

Invitations will be sent out next week for the special one-work exhibit at Landon School, 2131 Massachusetts avenue, Banfield said. About 200 artists, gallery heads and parents of pupils are expected to attend. Among them may be Homer Saint-Saems, son of the sculptor, who is head of the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh.

The bust never has left the possession of Mr. and Mrs. Torrey. Following the one-day exhibit, it will be returned to their Georgetown home.

Another Incentive For Garden Work

Staunton, Va., March 28 (Spl.).—O. L. Cook already has something to show for his gardening proclivities.

Turning over a spadeful of earth in his garden, Cook was surprised to see a pint of corn liquor. It is believed that the late contraband had been buried for several years.

Warren County Levies Cut 10 Cents by Board

Front Royal, Va., March 28 (Spl.). The Warren County supervisors yesterday reduced the tax levy for the town of Front Royal and Front Royal district 10 cents on the $100, as applying to the road debt fund. The levy for the other three districts of the county will remain the same.

The board will meet April 30 for adoption of the budget.

April Relief Need in D. C. Is $800,000

Emergency Works Takes Over Projects; Fund Request Ready.

Skilled Labor Hours Minimum Is Fixed at 30 Monthly.

A request for $800,000 to defray April costs of the Emergency Works Program, which next week replaces the District CWA, will be sent today to the Federal Relief Administration by District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan. This sum is about the same which has been disbursed each month on CWA projects.

Federal headquarters yesterday instructed Capt. Howard F. Clark, executive officer of the CWA that skilled workers are to be employed a minimum of 30 hours a month, or 28 hours less than was originally ordered. Unskilled workers will be employed a minimum of 58 hours.

The effect of the new order, Capt. Clark said, will be to enable the Emergency Works Administration to meet budgetary allowances which the worker would otherwise receive as direct relief. No skilled worker will be permitted to work less than three days a week.

Workers Are Limited.

Before anyone may be employed under the emergency works, Capt. Clark said, it is necessary for him to be on direct relief rolls. This will preclude many skilled workers, who are not on the relief lists, from obtaining work under the new program. After the applicant is placed on the relief rolls, he receives a work ticket from the emergency relief, calling for work which will be the equivalent of the applicant's relief needs.

If the budgetary requirement of the individual is below the minimum weekly wage, he can not receive employment, but must subsist on direct relief, Capt. Clark said. On the other hand, he pointed out, if the requirements of the applicant exceed the wages he would receive, the excess amount would be forthcoming from direct relief funds.

The budget requirements have been fixed by Director of Emergency Relief Leroy A. Halbert at from $22 to $35 a month.

All Off Relief Rolls.

All of the 8,500 CWA employes now on the pay rolls will be retained under the new program, as all were taken from relief rolls.

Under the CWA there were 15,000 persons employed, and it is expected that the 6,500 who were not on the relief lists will now enroll beginning next Thursday.

Tipsy Tadpoles Tell Scientist A Spree a Day Isn't Too Much

Long and Heavy Drinking Kills 'Em, but a Little Proves Harmless.

By Robert F. Whitney.

Observing tadpoles, Dr. Carl C. Speidel, professor of anatomy of the University of Virginia's medical school, has learned the effect of alcohol on nervous tissue.

Dr. Speidel's conclusions are two: That prolonged and continuous intoxication causes nerve degeneration, and that daily drunkenness of brief duration is practically harmless to nerves.

In his study of several years, this scientist uses small frog tadpoles. They are slightly anesthetized and placed under the microscope so that the individual nerve fibers in the transparent tail can be seen under high magnification.

In this manner, Dr. Speidel has been able to watch the growth of nerve sprouts, the formation of nerve sheaths and the changes during nerve injury and repair as they happen in the living tadpole.

Easily Led to Drink.

Leading the tadpole to drink (strong drink) was no difficult task. The frog tadpole's skin is readily permeable to alcohol, so the problem is just a question of putting the booze in the swimming bath.

Dr. Speidel found that in solutions of less than 0.5 per cent alcohol the future frogs would live indefinitely without indication of nerve injury. More than 3 per cent of alcohol caused death within an hour or two.

One result of his experiment Dr. Speidel linked directly with alcoholic neuritis in man. This was the fact that in tadpoles alcoholic degeneration starts near the nerve tips and progresses centrally, coinciding with clinical symptoms in humans.

One tadpole, which the doctor used, proved to be a strong-headed creature. Although it was given enough alcohol to stun it each day for three months, its nerves recovered between sprees and remained fairly normal in appearance.

When others showed this facility, Dr. Speidel concluded that daily but short intoxication was not enough to cause degeneration of either the nerve sheath or axis.

Grasshoppers Take to Air.

In announcing that the $2,354,893 campaign against grasshoppers in the Western States will be launched at once, the Department of Agriculture revealed that the "hoppers" are becoming better fliers than they have been in the past 60 years.

Telling of the great swarms that devoured Midwestern crops 60 years ago, the department stated: "Recently grasshoppers in the United States seem to be reverting to this strong flying type. Even the clumsy, heavy-bodied hoppers, which usually fly only a few feet when disturbed, are showing greater powers of flight."

Just Distant Cousins.

There is some relationship but no near one between apes and man. The gorilla, the chimpanzee and the orang outang are distant cousins, not ancestors.

This new concept, which differs quite radically from the two holding the stage in controversies over the descent of man, was advanced yesterday by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of physical anthropology of the Smithsonian Institution.

Dr. Hrdlick says he considers the great apes and man distinct stems which arose from a common ancestry probably some time during the Miocene geologic era—roughly 25,000,000 millions of years ago.

It is increasingly clear, Dr. Hrdlicka says, that every organ and feature in the human body differs too greatly from the organs and feature of the apes to permit the conclusion that they are merely variations of a recent common pattern.

Under this theory the life of the human family is extended backward for millions of years. This would make the oldest primitive man, the Java man, who lived 1,000,000 years ago, almost a contemporary figure.

One of the greatest tasks confronting anthropology, Dr. Hrdlicka says, is to clear up this blank of about 24,000,000 years in early history of the human race.

Driver Who Felled 8 Mail Boxes Safe for 30 Days.

Staunton, Va., March 28 (Spl.). For the next 30 days William Emore, of Augusta Springs, will not have any difficulty in keeping clear of mail boxes.

A night or two ago an automobile driver made his way from Swoope to Valley Mills, knocking down "all the mail boxes" along the route. Actually only eight or ten were toppled over as the machine careened along the highway, but the driver managed to keep the car out of the ditches.

State Traffic Sergt. Robert A. Lynn did some investigating and arrested Emore, who appeared before Magistrate John S. Grasty, pleaded guilty to driving a car while drunk, and accepted a 30-day jail term.

Berry Clark Case Today Goes to Jury

Fourth Trial in 2 Years Is Nearing Close at Ellicott City.

Former Official Charged With Misappropriating Montgomery Funds.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Ellicott City, Md., March 28—For the fourth time in two years, the case of Berry E. Clark, former clerk to the Montgomery County commissioners will be placed in the hands of a jury tomorrow.

The closing arguments on the first of 97 indictments returned against the 59-year-old clerk on charges of misappropriation of county funds will be begun at 10 a. m. tomorrow by State Senator Joseph P. Donovan, for the defense. Following will be the summation by State's Attorney James Clark, of Howard County. At the conclusion, Judge William H. Forsythe, jr., will turn the case over to the jury.

Seventeen witnesses were called today for the defense, all but one of whom were character witnesses. Mrs. Mamie Clark, invalid wife of the defendant, hobbled on crutches to the witness stand, where her testimony was quickly curtailed by objections from the prosecution.

The defense rested at 10.40 a. m. today and then State's Attorney Stedman Prescott summed up for four hours. He produced two charts, one showing the defendant's personal accounts and the other his accounts as a clerk, in an effort to prove that Clark had transferred funds from his clerical to his personal accounts.

The character witnesses, all prominent in Montgomery County, were Judge P. Hicks Ray, of the Orphans court at Rockville; Judge and Mrs. Donald A. DeLashmut, of Rockville; Andrew J. Cummings, president of the Maryland State Fair Association; Clayton K. Watkins, clerk of the circuit court; Capt. Joseph C. Cissel, counsel to the county commissioners; J. Herbert Cissel, president of the Silver Spring National Bank and brother-in-law of the defendant; Hiram W. Harvey, former county commissioner; Judge Charles W. Woodward, of the circuit court; Harrison B. Cashell, registrar of wills; O'Dorion W. Roby, member of the State House of Delegates; George E. Nicholson, of Olney, Md.; Mayor Douglas M. Blandford, of Rockville; Roger Spates, former mayor of Rockville; Howard E. Morrow and John Karn, Rockville business man.

Three previous juries failed to agree.

Walt Mason, Himself

Former Millionaires.

It seems a shame that no one cares, with honest sympathy, for all the busted millionaires who swarm upon the lea. They basked on downy beds of ease through all their younger years; they lived on fine imported cheese and roasts from stall-fed steers. In purple and fine linen clothed, they would divide the spoil, and it's no wonder if they loathed such things as honest toil. They had fine cars in which to chase across the sunlit world; they had swift yachts in which to race for cups bedecked with gold. In gorgeous homes in ample grounds they lived the bright years through; they had their horses and their hounds, and every dream came true. A millionaire of days gone by comes shuffling to the door; he asks us if we have a pie, for he is starved and sore. And do we bid him step inside, and chant a welcome hymn? Ah, no; we rear up in our pride and read a lecture grim. "Why don't you get an honest job and earn some 80 cents? The Government will hire a mob of able-bodied gents." He never learned to ply a spade, a bucksaw or a hoe; he never learned a useful trade in days of long ago. He never learned to shear a sheep or milk a brindled cow; so he can only sigh and weep in his depression now. He never learned to paint a fence or fix a kitchen flue; and so there is in evidence no sort of place or pew.

Tribe Trims Nats, 4-3, in 10th After Cronin, in Left Field, Errs

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 28.—Dave Harris, the Greensboro sheriff, who is keeping one eye peeled for Dillinger and the other eye on a regular job in the Washington outfield, arrested the attention of this department as he sat in the Nats' hotel lobby and emitted deeply meditative smoke rings from his favorite brand of cheroot.

"I was just thinking," said Dave, "how I was gonna spend my share of the 1934 world series money."

Didn't Dave have his dates mixed? The 1934 world series was still six months away and there remained a little matter of 154 games this summer before series could be arranged.

"Yeah, I know that, I know that, but I don't mind waiting six months. October'll be here before you know it. You'd be surprised how time rolls by."

Dave Good Explainer.

Who told Dave Washington would finish first in the pennant race again?

"That's as plain as the nose on your face," said Dave with an insluating look at this department's schnozzle. "We got class, and those other clubs better concentrate on second place."

Izzatso?

"Yeah, 'at's so," said Dave. 'Who's gonna beat us? Not the Yankees. They're washed up. Not the Red Sox. They'll fold up when the hot summer months get here and the diamonds get hard and dry and fast and those balls go skipping through their infielders. Not Detroit. Mickey Cochrane may be a miracle man, but he ain't got no miracle team. Not Cleveland. They got pitching, catching and an outfield, but only one infielder—Willie Kamm—and it loks like they're not going to let him play.

'You can have the other clubs in the league. They'll win a game here an dthere, but they ain't winning no pennants."

No Fear of Waivers.

Did Dave know that somebody said he was due to be sent to Chattanooga as manager of the club one of these days?

"No they'd never get me out of this league. There's seven other clubc that wouldn't waiver on me. But if they want to send me down there to manage the club, it's all right with me. I'd be playing manager, though."

And how could Dave manage the club from the outfield? How could he tell when his pitchers were weakening?

"That would be all right, don't you worry about that. I could manage the club from center field, and I'd know when my pitchers were weakening."

"How, Dave?"

"Oh, I'd know all right. I'd know if they're weakening by the amount of running I'd be doing out there in the outfield. There ain't no better sign than that, is they?"

I guess not.

Runs, Hits and Errors.

Clark Griffith and Billy Evans, of the Cleveland Club, are still talking trade. Heine Manush strained a groin muscle in chasing a fly this afternoon and retired in the eighth inning . . . Buddy Myer's cigar never leaves his mouth until he's ready to toss it away . . . Elmer Klumpp is fielding .333 on pop fouls in the Cleveland-Washington series, and let another one get away today. . . . Gus Dugas hit a ball to left field that would have gone into the Washington bleachers despite the fact he is a southpaw hitter . . . He is putting himself in solid with Cronin, both at bat and afield . . . and later in the game he took Trosky's long fly off the right field fence without a quaver . . . The Nats return to Biloxi tonight for their last week in training camp.

Several preliminary bouts will be staged by Winchester talent and, it is expected that out-of-town boxers will furnish the main entertainment.

Picard Tops Golf Field With 137

Adds 68 to 69 to Take Lead Over Mehlhorn, Mortie Dutra.

Houghton, Harper Are Among Qualifiers for Final Round.

PINEHURST, S. C., March 28 (AP). Henry Picard, a 27-year-old professional from Charleston, S. C., had his putter playing tunes today as he shot a 68 to gain a two-stroke lead over the field after the first 36 holes of the North and South Open Golf Tournament here. The Carolinian had a two round score of lead later in the inning when Porter

The slender Southerner, who plays in only a few of the open tournaments but generally is in the money, had thirty-fours for both of his nine holes, and overtook Bill Mehlhorn, the Pouisville pro whose 67 yesterday gave him the first round lead.

Mehlhorn had 72 today and was tied for second with Mortie Dutra, big Spaniard from Detroit, who shot 67 to go with his opening round 72.

Armour, Dunlay Tied.

Tommy Armour, the black Scot from Detroit, and George T. Dunlap, jr., National amateur champion, were together at 141, while Wiffy Cox, Brooklyn sharpshooter, had 142. Armour and Cox, who had sixty-nines yesterday, reported 72 and 73 respectively, while Dunlap, who started with a 72, shot 69.

Johnny Revolta and and Harry Cooper were tied at 143, while Horton Smith, Johnny Kinder, Craig Wood and Johnny Golden were in the 144 bracket. Smith, who had 74 yesterday, jumped back into the thick of battle with 70 today.

Eight professionals, including Johnny Farrell, Denny Shute, Willie MacFarlane, Phin Perkins and Jimmy Hines, had 145's. Farrell, MasFarlane and Perkins, all with 70's yesterday, could do no better than 75. Farrell started well and finished the first nine in 34, but soared to 41 coming home, principally as a result of trouble with his tee shots.

Runyan Cards 77.

Bill Burke, Walter Hagen and MacDonald Smith were among those with 146's, while Paul Runyan, big-money winner of the winter season, had 150, with a 77 today. This left him 13 shots back of the flying Picard and almost precluded any possibility of his winning here, scene of his first major triumph in 1931.

Those having scores of 157 or better qualified for the last 36 holes tomorrow in quest of $4,000 in cash, and silver plates for amateurs.

Maranville Breaks Leg In Game

Collides With Yankees' Rookie Catcher in Double Steal.

Retains Consciousness; Hit Homer Earlier; Fans Weep.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 28 (U.P.). Walter (Rabbit) Maranville, captain of the Boston Braves, dean of major league infielders and one of the game's most glamorous personalities, suffered a broken left leg in today's exhibition game with the New York Yankees.

The injury occurred in the eighth inning when Maranville was sprinting home on a double steal. He collided with Norman Kies, Rookie catcher of the Yanks, snapping both bones in the leg, 5 inches above the ankle.

The 42-year-old Rabbit brought in the run that resulted in a 3-to-3 tie game. The game was called then because of Maranville's injury, which may end his career of 23 years in big time baseball.

Real Tragedy.

The injury was one of baseball's real tragedies. A woman screamed in the water-front park stands. Others wept. Calloused players turned away their eyes from the sight of the stocky little man who was hopping about on one leg at the home plate—the other limb dangling grotesquely in his stocking.

The Rabbit, who down through the years depended upon his agility and speed afoot, is through for many weeks—perhaps for good.

Dr. Prescott Le Breton, bone specialist at the Mound Park Hospital, who announced the extent of Maranville's injuries after a preliminary examination, said he could not predict definitely how long the little second baseman would be out of the game until X-ray photos were developed. He believed, however, that the leg would be in splints for at least eight weeks.

Endurance Amazing.

Dr. Le Breton said that Maranville's endurance was amazing; that it seemed almost impossible for him to have retained consciousness under such shock and pain.

After contributing a home run in the fifth inning, Maranville opened the eighth by beating out a hit to Crosetti at short. He went to third when "Shanty" Hogan singled to deep left. Simpson, a pinch runner for Hogan, was retired when hit with a ball batted by Urbanski, who reached first on the play.

On Urbanski's hit, the Rabbit crossed the plate safely, but fate was unkind to him. Under the rules base runners may not advance when another runner is hit with a batted ball. So the Rabbit was forced to return to third.

Try Double Steal.

Attempting a double steal, Urbanski started for second, Kies threw to Crosetti, and Maranville was off like a flash for the plate. He was ready to slide head first as he usually does to avoid accidents. But he saw he had the play beaten and came in erect.

He crashed into the shin-guarded legs of 178-pound Kies. He rolled over and over on the ground. Kies, not sure if the runner had touched the plate, ran over to tag him. Maranville waved him away feebly, rose to his good leg and hopped about.

He never lost consciousness while waiting for the ambulance which took him to Mound Park Hospital. He was hoisted into it, his leg in an improvised splint made by Doc Painter, Yankee trainer. He was accompanied to the hospital by Dr. Gideon Timberland, a local physician.

Although Maranville will be 43 in November, he was playing well in training and was slated for the regular second base job. It was his fifth season with the Braves during his last term in their uniform. He had served them once before, from 1912, when he broke into the majors, to the end of 1920. From 1920 to 1929 he was with Pittsburgh, Chicago, Brooklyn, Rochester and St. Louis. He started his career with New Bedford of the New England League in 1911 and played part of 1912 with that outfit.

V. P. I. Swimmers In Initial Contest

To Meet Roanoke Y.M.C.A. Team Tonight.

Blacksburg, Va., March 28 (Spl.). Virginia Tech fans will witness sports history in the making here tomorrow night when the Tech tankmen take their first plunge in competition against Roanoke Y. M. C. A.

The swimmers bring the number of Tech teams slated for competition this session to 14. The team is strictly a student enterprise, not under auspices of the college athletic association, but may be placed under association control in the future.

The Tech tankmen will go into action in their new pool without the services of Jack Bates, brilliant pacesetter in intramural meets. He has a physical ailment which will bar him from competition until next year. This tall sprint star from Richmond was described by his coach today as "one of the finest divers I have seen in collegiate ranks." His loss is a blow to the Gobblers.

Virginia Rally Scores Over Trenton

Cavaliers Get Six Runs in Fifth to Win, 8 to 5; Haaf a Star.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., March 28 (Spl.).—Scoring six runs in the fifth inning, Virginia's nine overcame a 4-run lead todefeat the University Club, of Trenton, here this afternoon, 8 to 5. Both teams fielded sharply throughout, the lone error by McFarland not figuring in the scoring.

Vanetta, who started on the mound for the Jerseyites, blanked the Cavaliers for four frames, but his successor, Spicer, was pounded from the mound the next inning, Lang finishing the contest.

Davidson went the entire route for the Cavaliers, yielding but four hits, one a homer by Perina, former Penn star. He exhibited a wild streak in the first frame, the visitors registering four runs on one hit. Lee, who played at New York University, contributed two singles. Carter started Virginia's rally in the fifth with a double, and Davidson, Drizzell and Rogers followed with timely hits to clinch the contest.

Three Double Plays.

The Cavaliers turned in three double plays to check the visitors' attack. Making his debut at first base, Haaf, who hails from Washington, accepted ten chances. His spectacular catch of Shema's long foul in the ninth was the fielding feature.

In the eighth Pancost gathered in Rogers' long fly just before he crashed into the left field fence. McFarland's one hand catch of Shema's short fly also won a hand. Craig, former Penn Stater, put up a great game at shortstop, for the Trentonites.

Chicago, March 28 (AP).—Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, won his first match in two starts in the world's 18.2 balkline billiard championship tournament today by defeating Ora Morningstar, San Diego, Calif., 400 to 230, in 13 innings. Cochran ran 158 in the second inning, the high run of the tournament so far. Morningstar's high run was 115 in the fourth. It was his second straight defeat.

Shush! Spies and Signs

By Jimmy Powers

(Pinch-hitting for Paul Gallico)

MIAMI, Fla., March 28.—Today's little sermon, my pals, is on spies, secret codes, signal stealing and other monkey-shines that make a ball camp something other than a spring parade ground for whinnying Charley-horses. Now, I don't profess to be one of those patronizing blokes who sees beauty where others fail or who reads into humdrum events hidden pulse quickeners supposed to reflect credit on the snooty omniscient observer.

Nevertheless it is true that there is a certain amount of Katzenjammer, baffled intrigue, and elaborate conspiracy in a ball game that 99 out 100 fans miss. Take that business of stealing signs (the players never call them signals). Every club in the league has some gent on its roster who prides himself on being a Hawkshaw.

"They've got the hit-and-run on," he'll shout and immediately there is a scurry in the dugout and the catcher is wigwagged his orders. The catcher signals his pitcher to throw wide so he can step out and whip the ball down to second base trapping the daring runner.

The ball whizzes wide, the batter stands there complacently, the base-runner remains rooted, an annoying smirk on his tanned face. And rival coaches hop delightedly up and down the lime stripes yoo-hooing derisively. Foiled again!

For years, Connie Mack ostentatiously fluttered his score card, rookie gazed with awe into the shadows of the Athletic hovel. The great mind was functioning. Mysteriously, outfielders retreated, infielders shifted, batters pulled their hits, runners galloped for distant sacks. All the time Mack's hocus-pocus was a blind. The bona fide orders were coming from an apparently listless coach or utility player on a far end of the bench. Some afternoons it was Eddie Collins and on other days it was Jimmy Dykes or Bing Miller who suddenly arose to secure a drink of ice water. If they used a tin cup it meant steal; a glass meant double steal. Drinking with the cap on or the cap off meant something else again.

This is a true story of our dear Dodgers, the only consistently colorful ball club in either circuit. The first scene opens in the Ebbets Field Clubhouse. The team has just dropped a heart cracker to the Giants chiefly through a mix-up in signals. Uncle Robby, good-natured as always, but with patience sorely tried, approaches his chief culprit, Floyd Herman.

"What's the matter with you, Babe? You missed the sign again. Gummed up the works. Dammit, do we always have to run them cushions backwards like flea-bitten monkeys?" Herman polishes his naked shoulder blades briskly with a Turkish towel. A cud of Virginia leaf the size of a bowling ball slides up and down his cheek. He expectorates deliberately. "Robby, I got an idea. We won't get mixed no more."

The moon-faced Robinson, never known to ignore any one's advice from Flatbush cab drivers to Myrtle avenue trolley conductors, perked up his ears. "It's just this," nonchalantly went on the illustrious Babe, snapping his wet towal into the exposed rear of a yelping comrade, "to hell with signs. Let's play without 'em." The curtain drops.

Seventeen games later we find our Dodgers in St. Louis. They have been burning up the league stealing bases, upsetting the opposition battrymen with their inspired daring and timely gambles. The records show 15 games won. Uncle Robby dashes into the dressing room.

"Hey, Babe," he shouts excitedly, "we're in first place." The nonchalant Mr. Herman digests the news calmly. "I know, the writesr say we'll win the pennant. We'll be the champions." Suddenly Robby slaps his forehead. "Oh, for Cripes sweet sake, I just happened to think—we got no signs.!"

The Babe pats Robby's shoulder. "Why that's O. K., we're winning, ain't we?" Robby screams, "Yes, but we gotta have signs. Tell me, did you ever hear of a championship club without signs? The Giants got signs, the Cards got signs. Say, even the Toledo Mud Hens got signs. Do you mean to say we can't have 'em? Boys, back, we go to the old ones tomorrow." That, my pals, was the beginning of the end. The Dodgers went back to prearranged signals. All strategy was painstakingly mapped out and the club skidded and kept on losing until it finished in fourth place.

Reds Nose Out Red Sox in 11th, 4-3

Lombardi's Single Decisive; Macks Beaten; Other Results.

SARASOTA, Fla., March 28 (AP).—Ernie Lombardi's 11th inning single, which scored Flowers from second base, today gave the Cincinnati Reds a 4-3 overtime victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The American leaguers were unable to do anything against the offerings of Larry Benton and Si Johnson until the ninth when they scored three runs on the latter to tie the score. Max Bishop opened that frame with a single and Johnson passed Cissell and Morgan. With the bases full, Roy Johnson scored two with a drive to right field and Morgan counted on Reynolds fly.

Pilot Misses Spencer's Pop in Sun

Fluke Double, Single, Walk, Outfield Fly Spell Defeat.

Washington Outhits Foe, 11-5, as 10th Opens; Lucky to Tie.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

NEW ORLEANS, March 28.—The Cleveland Indians won a game of blind man's buff from the Nats this afternoon, 4 to 3, in a comic opera tenth inning that found Joe Cronin attempting to play left field.

After withdrawing so many of his regulars in the late innings that he left himself with only two outfielders, Cronin gave up his shortstop job to Bob Boken and hied himself out to left field at the the start of the tenth. What followed was terrific.

Roy Spencer lifted a harmless pop fly into left and Cronin dashed in, raised his eyes to the sun, suddenly became aware of the fact that he wasn't wearing sun glasses, stopped in his tracks, sheltered his managerial pate with his hands and glove and permitted the ball to drop safely 30 yards in front of him for a two-base hit.

Spencer Scores Run.

Then the Indians went out and won the ball game against Jack Russell, with Earl Averill beating out a hit to Travis, Trosky walking to fill the bases with one out, and Willie Kamm lifting a long fly to Schulte that permitted Spencer to ambie home from third with the winning run.

Before Cronin sponsored the Cleveland victory in the tenth, the figures were doing a heap of lying. The Nats had 11 hits to 5 for the Indians but were lucky to have a 3-3 tie, with a wild throw by Second Baseman Eddie Moore giving them the tying run in the fourth inning.

Six consecutive hitless innings were wasted by the Nats' pitchers as a result of their betrayal by Cronin. From the third to the ninth, Earl Whitehill, pitching four innings, and Jack Russell, pitching two, permitted no Injun to get a hit but with the Nats wasting their owa wallops, they wound up in defeat.

Start Scoring Early.

Al Thomas started the Indians on their winning way in the first inning when consecutive singles by Pytlak, Averill and Vosmik figured in two runs. Johnny Stone walloped a triple behind Myer's walk in the third and when Manush singled, the Nats had two runs back. But Cleveland bounded into a 3-2 lead later in the inning when Porter doubled and Trosky scored him with a single.

Thereafter the affair settled down into a duel between Monte Pearson, who followed Hildebrand, and Ralph Winegarner, the third Cleveland pitcher, and Whitehill and Russell.

Senational fielding by Heine Manush and Joe Kuhel kept the Indians off the bases against White-

Sabula Wins Handicap at Tropical at $3.40; Fire Mask Hurt on Way to Post

Filly Annexes Her Second Straight

Catches My Purchase at Three Furlong Pole for Triumph.

Whizzaway Victorious; Second in Row for Papyrograph.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 28 (AP).—Godfrey Preece's steady going filly, Sabula, after being backed down to $3.40 for $2, accounted for the featured Seth Parker Purse, at a mile and a sixteenth, here this afternoon for her second straight success at the Gables course. The daughter of Macaw, with Jimmy Hunter in the saddle, scored handily by two lengths over J. Badame's Khorasan. Her time was 1:43 4-5. Mrs. M. Colford's My Purchase lost the place by a length and a half.

Backers of Fire Mask, considered one of the chief contenders, were greatly chagrined when it was necessary to withdraw the filly. She jumped the inner rail and suffered a nasty looking cut on her left hind leg while on the way to the post. Under the rules, no money wagered on Fire Mask could be refunded as she had left the paddock for the post.

Holds Contender Safe.

Khorasan jumped into command at the break, but gave way to My Purchase upon entering the back stretch. Hunter suddenly shot Sabula up with a strong spurt midway of the far side and the filly gained the lead at the 3-furlong pole. She easily drew away from My Purchase. Khorasan came again in the in the last furlong, but the winner held him safe.

Jockey R. Mozer was suspended for the remainder of the meeting for an unsatisfactory ride astride Ramus in the third race.

Beginners Bait was an odds-on favorite in the dash for maiden juveniles that opened the sport, but although hard ridden, the Bradley youngster was barely able to get in the money. Whizzaway, paying $14.50, took an early lead and drove home by a length and a half. Dark Zeni moved up fast from a slow beginning and beat the choice by a half length for the place.

Candy Prince Scores.

Candy Prince, one that works sensationally in the mornings, found the right spot in the second event, another dash for maiden 2-year-olds, and scored easily by a length and a half. Backed down to nearly 1-to-1, the gray colt broke in stride and never was menaced. Carmanchita, a big filly with the development of a 4-year-old, made her debut and closed fast to take the place by a length from Specs.

Singing Heart again failed to make good at a short price in the third contest. The filly finished out of the money after forcing the early pace of Levaal, which raced clear and scored by a length to pay $9.50. Ondott made up ground fast in the final three furlongs, taking the place by two lengths from Tom Jack, Jr.

Papyrograph Scores.

Papyrograph, which came to life in his last start to score at long odds, came right back to win again in the fourth event. This time the elderly plater was favorite, paying $6.80. Transen was second, a length and a half back and a like distance before Happy Scot. The race was run to order for the winner. Transen and Happy Scot ran themselves into the ground and "Pap" easily ran over the pair in the stretch.

Another of those typical tropical close finishes materialized when Try Fair lasted to beat Lauretta Nash by the tip of his nose in the sixth race. Jimmy Hunter made it two in a row on the winner, which was a $5 favorite. Bert Lahr was beaten a half length for second money. Try Fair caught Patrice Runyon midway of the backstretch but he barely lasted when Lauretta Nash came with a great late bid.

Apprehensive, $12.90, beat Gibby's Choice by a half length in the nightcap. Jane Ellen was third.

Oxford Golfers Win.

Formby, England, March 28 (AP). Oxford today won 5 of the 10 singles and halved another to defeat Cambridge in the annual intervarsity golf match, 8½ points to 6½. The Oxonians took three of the five foursomes yesterday.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

The noisemaking apparatus of the male cicada, sometimes erroneously called the locust, is the most complicated known in nature and, among insects, it is the most successful, for the cicada is the noisiest of all insects. Yet, strange as it seems, the cicada can not hear the noise it makes. It feels, rather than hears, its own noise.

The sound organ consists chiefly of drum-like plates near the base of the abdomen, which are vibrated with great rapidity by powerful muscles. There is, in addition, other plates which are set in sympathetic vibration, and which seem to mirror the sound, causing various effects in tone. Only the males can make any sound, the females are without sound-producing organs. The call of the males in chorus can be heard for a quarter of a mile or more.

The cicada family consists of a thousand or more species. One of the most famous is called the "17-year locust," which emerges from the ground in pupa stage to become adult approximately 17 years after it entered the ground in the larval stage. Other kinds of cicada have life cycles of various lengths and are called "2-year locusts," "13-year locusts," &c.

It is a common practice in Persia for rug makers to lay their finished rugs out on the highway where traffic passes freely over it. In this way only can the fine sheen of a real Persian rug be obtained, or at least so they believe.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Tropical Park, March 28.

Dear Al:

Mike will say I'm just plain lucky, but I would rather believe I'm getting warmed up for the Bowie meeting. The fact remains, however, that Bennings, Inc., picked, selected, gave, hustled, produced, handicapped or named four winners today. If you don't believe it, count them: Candy Prince, $3.10; Levaal, $9.50; Sabula, $3.40, and Apprehensive, $12.90. It seems that there has been monkey business going on in the mutuel department. Certain persons have been getting stacks of winning tickets after the race. That's what the horsemen call "sticking your hand in." I wouldn't enjoy that, however. Takes all the kick out of the sport if you're not interested in which horse wins.

BILL.

First race — Billie's Orphan appears ready to take the opener. Has been showing much speed of late and the impost of 106 pounds is only steadying weight. Battling Knight and Calgary Kay to battle it out for the other awards.

Second race — Canoble Lake has all the earmarks of a winning favorite in this dash for maiden juveniles. May win despite Yowell's poor riding. Hero's Lady will have Walls in the saddle and will be ready if the top one makes mistakes. Winged Flight to show.

Third race — Steel gives away weight to this crew, but is still good enough to get home first, I do believe. Uppercut and Mareve to take care of the remainder of the field.

Fourth race—I'm taking Prosecutor to defeat Foreign Lady in this sprint. Burke will ride and I don't believe top weight will bother this youngster. Manual is a dangerous one.

Fifth race — Waterway gets the Bennings' call here. Mattioli is not in bad riding form and the horse is reported primed for a real race. One Chance's last was encouraging. Renewed for the show.

Sixth race—Fair Crest, with Hunter in the saddle, may supset the dope here. I warned you about this one and he barely missed taking a purse last week. Hasty Belle and Drusus to outfoot the others.

Seventh race—Attribute was a hot tip last out and failed. Fisher rides tomorrow and the surprise package may get home. El Puma and Spud to do the chief chasing.

County Plans Probe, May Air Turf Fraud Charges in Court

MIAMI, Fla., March 28 (AP).—With a view to possible institution of criminal action in court, County Solicitor Fred Pine said today he would investigate charges of fraud in the pari-mutuel department at the Tropical Park track here on which the State Racing Commission permanently barred four men from all racing plants in Florida.

Pine said he would ask the commission for a transcript of testmony it took at a hearing at which an expose was made of alleged irregularities in the department and would press for criminal action if sufficient grounds were found.

State's Attorney Vernon Hawthorne also said he would obtain a transcript of the testimony and would presetn the case to a grand jury in event he found sufficient grounds and the county solicitor took no action.

Commission members said that under the alleged scheme, pari-mutuel sheets were manipulated so that the winning figures of a "numbers" lottery were predetermined, and unsold tickets on winning horses were cashed.

Tribe Downs Nats In 10th Inning, 4-3

hill, although his fourth consecutive hitless inning — the seventh—was fraught with all sorts of possibilities. An error by Cronin with two out put Porter on base and a spree of wildness by Whitehill filled the sacks. He finally made Vosmik hit into a force play.

Pass Up Chance.

The Nats passed up a glowing opportunity in the eighth when with one out Cecil Travis for the first time this season gave evidence of his hitting prowess by lambasting a lusty triple up against the far-flung centerfield fence to put the winning run on third. But here a distinct brand of Southern Association umpiring thwarted the Nats when a third strike was called on Klumpp on a pitch that was low and outside by a matter of feet.

That was the Nats' last gesture and the Indians, who had been hitless since the third inning, took advantage of Cronin's presence in left field in the tenth to take the ball game away.

Tourney at Frederick.

Frederick, Md., March 28 (Spl.). The Class of 1936 Basket Ball Team won the championship of the girls' intermural tournament, in progress here for a week, by defeating the champions, Class of 1935, 31 to 15.

Stocks Droop Fraction After Quiet Fight

Rails and Metals Active; Sales Total Cut to 863,885 Shares.

New York, March 28 (AP).—Stocks were quietly resistant today following yesterday's reaction, trading again fell off to a low volume and although offerings had dried up there was little to indicate Wall street's feelings of uncertainty had undergone a change.

Activity centered chiefly in a few low priced rails and the metals. Motors improved. Steel stocks made slight fluctuations as further announcements of wage increases came out. Rails generally were dull, nor could utilities get out of the rut.

Net changes proved to be largely fractional, the averages being up two-tenths of a point in a turnover of 863,885 shares, one of the year's lightest markets.

Western Pacific Strong.

Western Pacific issues were exceptionally active and strong. Wall street attributed the interest in them to the move made by Denver & Rio Grande Western toward meeting interest payments on its junior bonds and also to reports that Western Pacific Railroad's own bondholders were responding favorably to the proposal for an extension of interest due this year to 1937.

Western Pacific has a 50 per cent stake in the D. R. G. W., the other half being owned by Missiuri Pacific, whose shares also strengthened. Net gains in this group of rails ranged from fractions to a couple of points. At the top, Western Pacific preferred was up more than three, making the best price in three years.

Some of the gold mining issues strengthened, McIntyre and Dome each gaining about a point. Preferred stocks of McCrory, McClellan and First National Stores sallied upward; a reorganization plan is afoot for the McLellan organization. Such standbys as U. S. Steel, American Telephone, General Motors, Chrysler, Du Pont, Santa Fe and General Electric finished with little change. Union Pacific rose slightly more than a point on the day.

Conjectures on Industrials.

The rather negative tenor of midweek industrial statistics lead to some conjecture as to whether seasonal influences had about expended themselves. Iron Age placed steel production at 48 per cent, off half a point from last week, although it said "the President's success in averting an automobile strike has revived hopes * * * for a resumption of the upward sweep of demand." Also, bookings from motor car manufacturers were said to have picked up with passage of the strike threat and as railroad business is increasing the operating loss was believed to be temporary.

For both the automotive and steel businesses much may depend on whether increased costs can be absorbed by larger volumes or higher selling prices. Iron Age says a rise in steel quotations is regarded as "a logical sequel" to wage advances, "since it is unlikely that volume will expand sufficiently in April or May to cover the added cost."

Indications are that freight traffic diminished last week as compared with the preceding week; the New York Cntral and Pennsylvania. large movers of goods, reported smaller handlings. Electric power production was up moderately.

Followers of Foreign Exchange Market See Possible Early Opportunity for Testing Whether We Are Willing to Permit Export of Gold.

By Ralph West Robey.

During the two months since the dollar was devalued to 59.06 cents an interesting point of speculation has been whether we would permit the export of gold should this level be reached in the foreign exchange market. At the time of the reduction of the gold content of the dollar there was a clear intimation on the part of the Secretary of the Treasury that permission fo rsuch export would be given. In spite of this, nevertheless, many people have remained skeptical as to whether in the case of a showdown we would give up any of the precious metal. In other words, it has remained an open question in the minds of these people whether we did anything more than undercut the value of the dollar in the foreign exchange market with the result that, should the 59.06 price be reached, there would be another reduction in the dollar content in preference to permitting gold to leave the country.

Those who have been especially interested in this problem now begin to see possibilities that we will have a test of their thesis in the relatively near future. This will come in connection with the rate on French francs.

Theoretically it might occur with one of the countries now on an irredeemable paper basis, but practically this is improbable. This is because in these cases there necessarily is more or less of a race in depreciation and, consequently, the price of the paper currencies in our market can not climb high enough to create a demand for gold exports. In other words, their currencies will not rise to the gold export point, or the price at which it is cheaper to ship the metal than it is to buy balances held by our banks abroad.

Gold Export Point for Francs Is About 6.7 Cents.

The gold export point is calculated by adding to the par of exchange the cost of shipping the metal. The par of exchange, of course, indicates the relative gold content of the two currencies. Before our devaluation, par, for French francs was 3.92 cents. At present it is 6.63 cents. The cost of shipping francs amounts to about 1 per cent, giving a gold export point of approximtely 6.7. Necessarily, the exact figure varies according to the speed of the boat upon which the metal is shipped, the rate of interest, &c.

In the middle of January the French franc was selling at around 6.01. By the end of the month it climbed to about 6.25 the exact figure on January 31—the day before we devalued the dollar—being 6.26. The immediate effect of our "stabilization" was to cause the price to jump with the result that on February 1 it was 6.37. From this there was a reaction, the rate falling to 6.2 on February 5, but from then on there was virtually a continuous climb toward the par of exchange.

Continued Profitable to Ship French Gold to U. S.

During the climb, or from the time we offered to pay $35 an ounce for all gold until the franc reached 6.59, it remained profitable to ship gold out of France to the United States. This means that it was profitable, say, for an American to go into the foreign exchange market here, buy French francs, convert the francs into gold at the Bank of France and ship the gold back to the United States for sale to the Treasury. It was such transactions as these that resulted in the huge importation of gold in recent weeks.

During most of this month, nevertheless, the profit on such a transaction has been insignificant. The rate has been hovering around 6.58 to 6.59. Finally, on March 21, it crossed the gold import point, running above 6.60. In fact at one time in Paris the rate got as high as 6.66. Since then it has eased off a little and now is back around 6.58 to 6.59, or the point at which it is not profitable for gold to move in either direction.

Only a comparatively slight movement of capital, nevertheless, would drive the rate from this present level to the gold export point. It is this fact which makes the present situation so interesting to those anticipating a test of our willingness to export gold. Just what will cause the little fillip is an open question. Those following the foreign exchange market, nevertheless, think that it is only a matter of comparatively short time until they have their question answered.

Western Union Net Advances To $4,364,882

Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. Reports '33 Income of $7,443,613.

New York, March 28 (AP).—The sharp improvement in general business conditions in the last half of 1933 enabled the Western Union Telegraph Co. to show a substantial net income for the year as against a deficit in 1932, the annual report to stockholders showed today.

Net income of $4,364,882, which included a special dividend of $1,162,545 from the American District Telegraph Co. (N. J.), was reported, which contrasted with a deficit of $842,595 in 1932.

Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. reports for the year 1933 net income of $7,443,613 after taxes and other expenses, equal to $2.93 a share on 2,540,000 shares, compared with net income of $5,910,492, or $2.33 a share in 1932.

Current assets as of December 31 totaled $22,669,322 and current liabilities were $973,216, compared with assets of $18,189,429 and liabilities of $908,548 at the end of 1932.

Superior Oil Corporation reported net loss in 1933 of $327,344 after depreciation, depletion and other charges, compared with net income in 1932 of $9,436. From operations alone the corporation showed profit of $146,906.

Charges in 1933 included expenditures of approximately $115,000 for the winding up of receiverships in Oklahoma and Texas, which was a nonrecurring expense. In addition the corporation paid $160,000 on account of indebtedness incurred in connection with the purchase of the Moody Corporation.

Crown Cork & Seal Co. had 1933 net profit of $950,528, equal to $1.51 a common share, against net loss of $50,099 in 1932.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 84.8 Level

Federals Take Downward Drift; Sales Total $10,557,000.

New York, March 28 (AP).—The bond market moved in no particular direction today, and revealed but few important price changes in any group. There was a moderate inquiry for high-grade corporate ratings, resulting in higher levels in some directions. United States Governments, on the other hand, were inclined to sag a bit.

Trading interest showed no broadening, being about in line with recent daily volume at $10,557,000. The average price of 60 corporate issues was unchanged from the previous day.

Traders who specialize in the secondary lines took some bonds on the strength of moderate improvement in the stock list during the early trading. Such operations added a little to some loans of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, Chicago & North Western, Federal Light & Traction, Interborough Rapid Transit, International & Great Northern, Missouri Pacific, New Haven and a limited group of low-priced industrials and utilities.

Denver & Rio Grande 5s of 1978, on which the company announced yesterday interest would be paid on the April 1 due date, advanced another 4 points, making it 8 in all in the last two sessions.

The slight downward drift in United States Governments was accompanied by a light turnover. A few Treasury issues were up 1-32 to 3-32 of a point, but a larger number were off 1-32 to 7-32.

Foreign loans had no definite trend, but except for some of the German issues prices were rather steady. German municipalities and some of the corporate issues were weak, whereas the issues of the Reich held fairly well on some thinning of the selling pressure which has brought these bonds down sharply during the past week.

New York, March 28 (A.P.).—Cotton goods held steady today on light sales, gray cloths showing firmness as a result of fewer second-hand offerings at concessions. Rayon fancies are in steady demand and finishers are still busy processing them. Silk prints sell in small lots steadily. The demand for light colored men's wear for spot shipment continues unsatisfied due to limited stocks. Other wool goods in moderate demand. Holiday observances at Calcutta have brought about an inactive market here.

Wool Market.

Boston, March 23 (A.P.). (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Very few sales were closed in the Boston wool market. While some inquiries were received on the finer quality Western-grown wools, the inquiries in most cases did not result in sales. A weaker sentiment toward wool values made it possible for buyers who had to cover limited current requirements to buy at prices mostly on the low side of recent price ranges.

Cotton Drops To New Lows Under Selling

May Closes at 11.77 as General Market Falls 9 to 13 Points.

New York, March 28 (AP).—Cotton sank to new low ground for the current movement today under liquidation and increased Southern selling promoted by uncertainty over the outcome of cotton control legislation.

July sold off from 11.97 to 11.81, carrying the general market down to net losses of 15 to 19 points, but partial rallies followed on spot house buying. July closed at 11.89 with the general market finishing steady, at net losses of 9 to 13 points.

The market opened steady at declines of 3 to 7 points under commission and wire house selling and more liberal Southern offerings. Overnight reports of various Senate amendments to the Bankhead bill which the trade evidently regarded as possibly reducing its effectiveness brought out additional long cotton.

Brief Rally Caused.

Far Eastern price fixing and Liverpool buying on wider differences, when prices here failed to reflect relative early steadiness of the English market, caused a brief rally of a few points above initial levels. Selling then became rather more general with the declines uncovering stop orders.

In addition to commission house selling, offerings believed to be against 10-cent-loan cotton were quite heavy. Appearance of buying through spot houses in the late trading brought in some rebuying or covering and prices rallied about 6 to 8 points from the lowest. May, which had sold off from 11.86 to 11.71, closed at 11.77.

A private crop report indicated that farmers intended to plant 27,302,000 acres to cotton this spring. Exports today, 3,743, making 6,104,054 so far this season. Port receipts, 9,912. United States port stocks, 3,160,726.

Trade Balance In U. S. Favor Is $29,867,000

February's Adjusted Index Shows 6 Per Cent Gain in Value.

(Associated Press.)

Value of American exports in February showed a gain of 6 per cent in the Commerce Department's adjusted index, although their dollar value declined.

Exports were valued at $162,805,000 compared with $172,224,000 in January. Imports were valued at $132,938,000 compared with $135,552,000 in January. The favorable balance of trade was $29,867,000.

Although the value of exports declined, the decline was less than usual at this season. The department thus interpreted the figures as indicating an improvement over January. Usually exports decline 11 per cent between January and February, but this year the decrease was 5 per cent.

Decline in Imports.

Imports declined 2 per cent, the usual amount.

The gain in exports over the extremely low levels of a year ago was 43 per cent and in imports 41 per cent. Although increases in prices since February, 1933, have contributed to the higher total values, the quantity of goods involved is substantially larger.

Total exports through February this year were $335,029,000, compared with $222,104,000 in the same period last year. Imports this year were $268,489,000, compared with $179,754,000 last year. The 1934 favorable balance for the two months was $66,540,000, compared with $42,350,000 in the same two months of 1933.

Decline in Exports.

The decline in exports during February, compared with January, was the result of smaller shipments of a wide range of commodities, while smaller imports of manufactures foodstuffs and semimanufactures were responsible for most of the February import decline.

Imports of gold in February were only $51,000, compared with imports of $452,622,000. Exports in February last year were $21,521,000, compared with imports of $30,397,000. The excess of gold imports so far this year is $449,805,000, compared with an excess of $137,341,000 in January and February of 1933.

Exports of silver in February were $734,000, compared with $2,128,000. In 1933 February silver exports were $209,000, compared with 855,000 of silver imports. The excess of silver imports in February was $1,394,000, compared with $646,000 in February, 1933. The excess of imports of silver for January and February combined was $4,129,000 in 1934, compared with $858,000 for the same two months of 1933.

Developments in World Trade

(Based on radiograms and cablegrams to Department of Commerce.)

German business activity is being maintained approximately unchanged, with a few spotty improvements due to the government's employment program.

The situation in Czechoslovakia, as represented by unemployment statistics, appears slightly better than a year ago, but conditions are seasonally dull.

Labor troubles in Belgium have added an element of uncertainty to the trade outlook in recent weeks.

Business in Portugal is good for the season, although demand for textiles from the Colonies has been less than anticipated; sentiment is generally optimistic.

The general feeling of uncertainty continues to prevail in the Philippines and prices for the leading exports have been exceptionally low since the first of February.

Developments in Argentina are fairly satisfactory, with agricultural prospects good and exports maintained at a high level.

Continued improvement is observable in Chilean mining and industry, and the only adverse factor is a slight sagging of agricultural prices.

Gradual upturn in Peru is being maintained; exchange conditions favor import buying and the cotton outlook remains bright.

Trade in Central America continues to gain.

Sustained high coffee prices are creating a favorable reaction in Colombia.

The greater activity prevailing in Cuban sugar mills has stimulated employment, trade, and the circulation of money.

The outlook is good in Jamaica owing to rising prices for export products and the short cacao crop in Trinidad has stimulated quotations.

The adverse effect of floods in British Guiana is being rapidly eliminated.

West's Silver Smelters See Full Operation

Work in Prospect Justifies Plans for Indefinite Activity.

New York, March 28.—For the first time in years Western silver smelters report sufficient work in prospect to justify continued operations for an indefinite period, according to a comment on Western business by the Bank of America, Pacific Coast branch banking organization.

The apparent improvement in the silver mining industry which has resulted in the reopening of extensive operations in Colorado, Texas and Nevada in recent months, is said to demonstrate, for the first time, the effect of the Presidential proclamation of December 21 last, when the price of newly mined metal was raised to 64.5 cents an ounce.

West Coast smelters say that shipments of silver-bearing ores have increased materially, and it is expected that the domestic output of the refined metal during 1934 will establish a high mark for at least half a decade.

Government figures just compiled show silver production of the 11 Western States to have reached $7,854,801 during 1933, or approximately 25 per cent above 1932. This increase roughly corresponded to the increase in the price of silver during the same period, the average price in 1933 having been $0.345 as against $0.282 in the previous year.

Accordingly, the substantial boost in silver prices resulting from the Presidential proclamation at the close of last year is expected to result in greater production in 1934 than has been witnessed in many years.

Since the proclamation sustaining silver prices has a prospective life of four years, Western silver interests look for continued activity for some time to come.

Linen Trade Of Ireland Is Progressing

Appreciable progress has been noted in the linen industry of Northern Ireland during the current year, according to a report from the American consulate general, Belfast, made public by the Commerce Department.

Declared exports of flax and flax manufactures from Belfast during January-February, 1934, were valued at $2,084,309, compared with $1,385,751 for the corresponding period of 1933. While conditions in the Irish linen trade during the first two months of the year have been quiet, the tone is good and shows perceptible improvement.

Merchants generally consider, the report states, that their present trade is at least 25 per cent better than at the corresponding time last year. The bulk of the United States business, it is pointed out, continues to be on the basis of sales from the New York warehouses of the large Irish manufacturers, but lately the ordering of goods direct from Belfast merchants and manufacturers has tended to expand. A number of American and Canadian buyers are now visiting the Belfast market.

It is estimated that about 80 per cent of the linen weaving looms in Northern Ireland are now operating. According to minister of labor figures, the total number of unemployed in the flax, linen and hemp industry in northern Ireland on February 19, 1934, was 10,381, or 17.1 per cent of that trade group.

Rail Mergers May Follow Court Decision

Upholding of Pennsylvania Road's Extended Interests Revives Old Plans.

New York, March 28 (AP).—Eastern railroad executives have begun to pay more attention to the problems involved in consolidations as a result of the decision of the Supreme Court last week, setting aside an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission directing the Pennsylvania Railroad to divest itself of holdings in the Wabash and Lehigh Valley Railroads.

The decision, which was pleasing to railroad men who want to consolidate various lines was, however, somewhat tempered by the fact that the eight justices of the court were equally divided, whereas, it had been hoped that clear-cut decision would be rendered and thereby remove all doubt as to the legality of one railroad acquiring the stock of another.

What the Interstate Commerce Commission will do, if anything, has not yet been announced.

No other divestment suits against railroads are pending.

Eastern Merger Plan.

Upholding of the right of the Pennsylvania to hold Wabash and Lehigh Valley stocks as investments, affects the plans for distribution of railroads under the proposed consolidation plan.

The Pennsylvania is scheduled to receive the Wabash in its system. The Supreme Court decision, therefore, removes all doubt about intermediate steps of segregation, although the receivership of the Wabash complicates plans for retaining control in the reorganization.

Under tentative plans, the Lehigh Valley is slated to be acquired by the Chesapeake and Ohio. Since forced segregation has been avoided by the Pennsylvania, the necessity of an immediate transfer at a severe loss to the Pennsylvania or at a price unjustified for the Chesapeake and Ohio has been removed.

Other Stocks Involved.

Other stocks that have been tied up pending completion of the Eastern plan include the Western Maryland, owned by the Baltimore and Ohio, which has placed the shares in escrow following an order of the I. C. C., and the Wheeling and Lake Erie, owned by the "Nickel Plate" which also placed the shares in neutral hands.

The Pennsylvania Company, owned and controlled by the Pennsylvania Railroad, owned 40 per cent of the stock of the Leigh Valley and Wabash lines, and when challenged by the I. C. C. contended that the acquisition was an investment. The Third Circuit Court of Appeals sustained the railroad in this contention and the decision of the Supreme Court upheld the lower tribunal.

The Commerce Commission contended that the Pennsylvania Company was merely acting for the railroad when the stock was purchased and took the position that the action might reasonably affect competition of the carriers.

Boston Bank's Unit Plans Separation

Affiliate Will Continue Business of Dealing in Securities.

Although no formal announcement has as yet been made, advices come from an authoritative source that the First National Bank of Boston has definite and nearly completed plans under way to divorce its affiliate, the First of Boston Corporation, with local offices, as required under the terms of the banking act of 1933.

This, it is stated, will be the first large bank affiliate to undertake a change in ownership as required by that act.

It is understood that when the plan is completed the First of Boston Corporation will alter its name slightly to the First Boston Corporation, and under that name will continue its business, without any change in policy, of distributing Government and other high-grade securities, largely to institutions, dealers and other large investors, through its same 22 offices in this country and its three offices in Europe and one in Buenos Aires, with its executive offices remaining in Boston and New York.

Lead Mines Reopen.

Platteville, Wis., March 28 (U.P.) Although market prices for zinc and lead ore are not satisfactory from the miner's point of view, the zinc-lead region of southwestern Wisconsin is showing signs of renewed activity. More than a score of mines are in operation, with company officials believing that better business conditions actually are "just around the corner."

Industrial Activity Advances To Highest Level for 3 Years

Factory Employment and Pay Rolls Set Records in 1934 Upturn and Value of Construction Contracts Increase During March, Reserve Board Reports.

(United Press.)

A rise in factory employment and pay rolls to the highest level since the summer of 1931 on an adjusted seasonal basis and new gains in industry and banking were reported by Government agencies yesterday.

Higher employment, pay rolls and industrial activity during February were reported by the Federal Reserve Board. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation announced a half billion dollar increase in insured bank deposits since January 1.

Business activity in February, the Reserve Board reported, rose to 81 per cent of the 1923-25 average from 78 per cent in January and 69 per cent in February, 1933.

The Reserve Board survey did not include further gains in activity during March reported by private agencies.

"Factory employment and pay rolls," the Reserve Board said, "increased substantially between the middle of January and the middle of February to a higher level, on a seasonally adjusted basis, than at any other time since the summer of 1931. Working forces on railroads also showed an increase.

"At automobile factories there was a large increase in the number of employed to approximately the level prevailing four years ago. Substantial increases were reported also for the textile, clothing, shoes and tobacco industries."

"Value of construction contracts awarded as reported by the F. W. Dodge Corporation," the Reserve survey continued, "showed a decline in February, followed by an increase in the first half of March."

Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, reported that insured bank deposits increased in the first two months of this year by $449,559,099 to a total of $15,512,744,137. The number of insured accounts rose 2,068,229 in January and February to a total of 54,814,249.

Largest increases by States in the number of banks participating in the insurance fund were: Wisconsin, 156; Texas, 133; Pennsylvania, 66; Ohio, 62; New York, 55; Kansas, 53; Missouri, 49; Nebraska, 45; Iowa, 44; Illinois, 38; Indiana, 34, and Michigan, 30.

Mexico's Exports To U. S. Decline

Shipments and Gold Are Shifted to European Countries.

Increased exports to European countries and curtailed shipments to the American market featured the export trade of Mexico during 1933, according to a report compiled in the Commerce Department's division of regional information.

Mexican exports to the United States during the calendar year 1932 were valued at 174,871,000 pesos against 199,012,000 pesos in 1932. Shipments to Great Britain in 1933 were valued at 79,484,000 pesos, compared with 12,094,000 pesos in 1932, while Germany took 27,365,000 pesos worth of Mexican products in 1933 against 20,000,000 pesos in the preceding year. France, Spain, Belgium and Sweden also purchased more Mexican products in 1933 than in 1932.

The decline in Mexico's exports to the United States in 1933, as compared with the preceding year, the report points out, and the corresponding increase in exports to Great Britain are largely accounted for by the shift in a large part of Mexico's gold shipments from the United States to London.

Irrigation Project To Start in Mexico

The Mexican government may soon take the first steps in connection with the extensive irrigation project planned for Torreon, the chief cotton-producing area of the republic, according to Assistant Commerial Attache R. G. Glover, Mexico City, in a report to the Commerce Department.

The enterprise involves the construction of a dam on the Nazas River, in the Laguna district, at a cost of approximately 30,000,000 pesos (about $3,500,000).

In addition to irrigating one of the finest cotton and wheat-growing sections of Mexico, it is calculated that this project will furnish sufficient hydroelectric power to take care of all the needs in and around the Torreon district, the Assistant Commercial Attache reported.

New Construction Work Started in Martinsville

Martinsville, Va., March 28 (Spl.). New construction passing the $20,000 mark is under way in this city during March, it was shown in a report furnished by B. S. Parrish at City Hall.

Five projects calling for new buildings and improvements have been authorized this month, the largest being the factory building of the Pannill Knitting Co., amounting to $12,000. Other work includes a new home and remodeling work. Repairs to the Acme Motor Co., recently damaged by a storm, will be made, costing $4,000.

New York Central Lines Loads Total 107,360

New York, March 28 (AP).—Freight traffic handled by the New York Central last week totaled 107,360 cars compared with 111,911 a week ago and 72,883 in the corresponding week of last year.

The Pennsylvania system handled 91,194 cars of freight last week compared with 96,565 the previous week and 70,039 a year ago.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, March 28 (AP).—Dow, Jones & Co. says an announcement as to what the U. S. Steel Corporation has decided to do about the customary stock offering to employes may be made at the company's annual stockholders' meeting next Monday. With few exceptions, it has been the corporation's practice to offer common shares to its workers in January or February, but this year nothing has yet been done, leading to reports that no offering would be made.

Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania reports February gross income of $4,788,903, compared with $4,672,285 a year ago. Net operating income was $1,120,254, against $915,690.

"The continued gain in employment and the generally favorable outlook makes it seem likely that savings are again on the upgrade," says Philip A. Benson, president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks which will hold a convention here on May 16, 17 and 18. "It is certain," he asserts, "that new accounts are being opened in growing numbers, which reflects both the will and the ability to serve. Our midyear figures are likely to show the largest number of accounts on record."

J. J. Pelley, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, says March freight traffic is running about 38 per cent above a year ago. If the trend is maintained he expects fixed charges will be covered this month. Passenger traffic is also larger than in March of last year.

All markets will be closed Good Friday, conforming to the usual custom. On Saturday trading will be resumed in securities and in the grain markets, but the New York commodity markets, with the exception of the Produce Exchange, will remain closed.

Raw sugar shipments from Puerto Rico to the United States from January 1 to March 24 totaled 256,960 short tons, an increase of 55.1 per cent over a year ago, reports the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange. Refined shipments amounted to 30,600 tons, a rise of 16.5 per cent.

Holders of Hugo Stinnes Industries, Inc., 7 per cent debentures due October 1, 1946, whether or not they have assented to the debt service plan announced last year, are eligible to receive a partial payment of $20 per $35 coupon due April 1, according to Dr. P. H. Saunders, chairman of the board. He said funds for the payments had been deposited with the paying agents.

New York Bank Stocks Decline During Week

New York, March 28.—New York City bank stocks declined during the last week, the aggregate value of the 16 leading issues, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, amounting to $1,491,925,000 as of the close March 23. This total compares with $1,574,171,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $82,246,000, or 5.22 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 5.36 per cent compares with a yield of 5.08 per cent at the close of the previous week. The current market value is now 1.25 times their known book value, against 1.32 times on March 16. Based upon current figures the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 11.3 times their known earnings, against 11.9 times on March 16.

Hard Coal Prices To Stand Until May

Philadelphia, March 28.—Some of the large anthracite companies have sent notices to dealers indicating that present circular prices for anthracite coal will be continued in effect until May 1.

In certain grades, however, it was indicated that although there will be no general revision in prices until after May 1, there may be some revision in specific sizes.

As a result of the substantial demand for anthracite during January and February due to the record-breaking cold wave, stocks of coal above ground were practically all cleaned up for the first time in years, it being necessary for the coal companies to draw upon inventory in addition to the stimulated production.

About the middle of March the demand started to ease up and producers again were putting some of the output in storage to build up stocks so as to get coal moving quickly in event of a spring demand in anticipation of next winter's needs.
